22,000 MORE OUT OF WORK

B.C. Tops Jobless Jump

Times News Service

British Columbia unemployment took the sharpest jump in Canada last month — a full one per cent — leaving 9.7 per cent of the work force out of work.

Across Canada, the figure was 7.4 per cent, up from 6.9 in March. It is the highest unemployment rate this year and an increase of 0.4 per cent from April a year ago.

The actual number without jobs is the highest since the government began counting the work force in 1940. The rate for April was also the highest for that month since April, 1961.

The national jobless rate is widely expected to grow worse later this year.

The actual number of jobless in British Columbia in April was 110,000 in March, up from 102,000 in April and 88,000 at this time last year.

The number of Canadians actually employed dropped to 1,005,000 from 1,006,000 a year ago while the total labor force increased to 1,116,000 from 1,093,000.

Across Canada, the increase in the jobless rate was centred in workers aged 25 or more. Statistics Canada said 4.4 per cent of men in that age group were out of work last month, up from 3.8 per cent in March. For women, the rate rose to 7.1 per cent from 6.1 per cent.

The gloomier jobless picture was apparent across the country. Only two provinces, Manitoba and New Brunswick, had lower unemployment last month than in March.

Manitoba had one of the best performances, as its jobless rate declined last month to 4.5 per cent from 4.9 per cent in March.

Saskatchewan held steady with four per cent of its work force unemployed in each month.

But in Alberta, unemployment rose for a second month as 4.1 per cent of jobs compared with 3.8 per cent in March.

Ontario's jobless rate worsened as the percentage of its labor force unemployed grew to 6.5 last month from 6.2 in the previous month.

And in Quebec, unemployment increased to 8.3 per cent of the work force from 7.7 per cent in March.

New Brunswick was the exception among the Atlantic provinces, as its jobless rate eased last month to 11.2 per cent from 11.5 per vent in March.

By contrast, unemployment rose to 9.1 per cent from 8.2 per cent in Nova Scotia. In Newfoundland — traditionally the province with highest unemployment — the rate rose to 14 per cent in April from 13.4 per cent in March.

There are still a large number of students coming on the labor markets for temporary work.

They will likely show up in higher jobless rates for under-25 age workers later in the year.

3 MORE SHOCKS

UDINE, Italy (UPI) — Three more tremors shook earthquake-devastated northeast Italy today, and soldiers shot stray dogs and cats to prevent an outbreak of rabies.

The tremors were mild and caused no panic, damage or further casualties. They brought to 52 the registered aftershocks, only one of which — early Sunday — was strong enough to create alarm and further crumble existing wreckage.

The Udine Prefecture counted the known dead at 914 and said the final toll should go above 1,000 with about 400 persons still missing.

NOT JUST THE WINE, IT'S THE WRAPPING

LONDON (UPI) — Sotheby's auction house will sell 10 bottles of wine this month for which, because of the wrapping, the minimum price will be $50,000.

The wine comes wrapped in a 1920 Rolls Royce Silver Ghost.

The car and the wine in its trunk — five bottles of 1920 Chateau Margaux and five of Chateau Petrus of the same vintage — are being sold by a commercial Rolls dealer.

It was wheeled into the dealer's premises Monday with motor power provided by four people pushing.

"Oh, it does run, all right," said a Sotheby's spokesman. "It was just being a bit temperamental."

LONG LINE of pickets went up at dawn today at Royal Jubilee as part of the province's first hospital strike.

Pared-Down Jubilee Coping On First Day of the Strike

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Picket lines went up at 6 a.m. today around all entrances to Royal Jubilee Hospital, the second of the province's 103 hospitals to be struck by the Hospital Employees Union.

The strike is expected to escalate to at least one other mainland hospital later today and will probably hit Victoria General Hospital later this week.

Jubilee is operating on an emergency-only basis and has pared services to the essential level, but seems to be coping with the situation, a hospital spokesman said today.

Pickets were stopping all cars and trucks going into the hospital this morning, asking where the drivers were going and handing out a leaflet explaining the strike "the Hospital Employees Union never wanted."

Hospital workers who belong to other unions are being asked for identification before being allowed through the picket lines to their jobs.

Emergency deliveries of hospital supplies are allowed, but firms delivering such supplies are supposed to notify the pickets before they arrive.

The union's secretary-manager Jack Gerow, in Victoria for the first day of the strike, said the HEU will use whatever strategy necessary to persuade the employers to accept the contract terms contained in an industrial inquiry commissioner report.

Gerow said Victoria General will be struck "whenever we can manage it," probably later this week, but he said there is a possibility of rotating strikes which would allow Jubilee to reopen while the General is shut down.

Gerow, standing in the union's strike headquarters set up on the Jubilee grounds, says the headquarters buildings is one of the ironies of the strike.

The Labor Relations Board, which set out the rules for the strike, ordered that Jubilee provide the HEU with a building where the union could set up its headquarters.

"They were ordered to give us a building so we could be nice and warm," Gerow says.

He calls it part of the "1984 bargaining that we're into."

Jubilee put its strike contingency plan into action at the weekend and is now maintaining only 769 of the 950 beds.

The hospital's executive director Dr. Archie Pickles said Jubilee can opeate for some time at the reduced services level, without affecting the quality of care given to patients who are in the hospital.

The emergency ward at the hospital is open and ambulances are allowed through the picket line without question.

In Vancouver, HEU members at Vancouver General are walking the picket line for the second week now and there appears to be no break in the impasse between the employers and the union.

Labor Minister Allan Williams is to meet today with representatives of the Health Labor Relations Association, the bargaining agent for the province's hospitals.

Williams said the meeting will be to determine whether there would be any point to asking the union to join discussions in an attempt to end the impasse.

He met with union officials on the weekend, but little came out of the meeting.

The escalation of the strike, especially if both Jubilee and General are shut down at the same time, could force the government to intervene.

Under the B.C. Labor Code, the labor minister can impose a 21-day cooling off period and even union officials seem suprised that that avenue has not yet been taken.

"Railroad workers are essential and I guess we're not," Gerow said this morning, referring to last week's legislation outlawing strikes on the B.C. Railroad."

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith called today's strike "appalling and shocking."

"I don't know where our society has gone, not only allowing strikes in essential services but in life and death," he said.

MARIJUANA EYEDROPS GOOD FOR GLAUCOMA

RESTON, Va. (AP) — Marijuana eyedrops effectively relieve symptoms of glaucoma and are ready for tests on people suffering from the eye disease, researchers say. But those taking the drops will have to put up with a side effect — getting high.

A researcher of the Medical College of Georgia said Monday that animal tests show liquid marijuana "is as good or better than any anti-glaucoma medication currently available."

Dr. Keith Green, associate professor of ophthalmology, said research emphasis is being placed on substances related to or derived from marijuana "that hopefully won't have the euphoric side effects."

New Lottery Plan Raked

Times News Services

The western provinces, Ontario and opposition MPs lashed out angrily Monday night at plans for a federal lottery to replace the Olympic lottery this summer.

Spokesmen for the western provinces say the new lottery, to be called Loto Canada and run by a Crown corporation will detract revenue from the present Western Lottery only to funnel the funds into Quebec.

Ontario Recreation Minister Robert Welch says the new lottery, unveiled earlier Monday by Treasury Board president Jean Chretien, is a far cry from one proposed by Ottawa and agreed to by the provinces last year.

At that time, plans were to have the revenue from any national lottery split among the provinces for any use they saw fit. Now, Welch said, "it looks as though Ottawa will use the money to promote sports in Canada."

Manitoba Health Minister Larry Desjardins said the new lottery could cost his province as much as $10 million in potential revenues.

As well, he accused Ottawa of making a deal with Quebec to help finance the cost of the Olympic Games.

"I think it's a double-cross," the minister said. "I call it dishonesty from the federal government."

B.C.'s provincial secretary Grace McCarthy also said she isn't happy.

Officials responsible for lotteries from the four western provinces will meet in Calgary on Wednesday to present their stand on the new lottery, she added.

In his announcement, Chretien said the new lottery, if successful, could raise as much as one-third of the money needed to pay the Olympic deficit.

The deficit is expected to be between $900 million and $1.3 billion.

While the lottery may run after 1979, Quebec will not get any more money from it for the Games' deficit, Chretien said.

The corporation will turn over 82.5 per cent of the profits to Quebec for the Olympic deficit and also to the 1978 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton.

The provinces will receive 12.5 per cent based on ticket sales and the federal government five per cent for national sport, recreation and fitness programs.

MEINHOF RIOT HURTS POLICE

FRANKFURT (UPI) — Police headquarters said today seven policemen were injured, two seriously, in fighting with demonstrators protesting the death in jail of urban guerilla leader Ulrike Meinhof.

About 600 demonstrators, shouting "murder in jail," threw firebombs and rocks at police Monday.

One firebomb caught Juergen Weber in his police patrol car and turned him into a human torch, police said.

Mrs. Meinhof, a 41-year-old left-wing writer, was found hanging early Sunday in the Stammheim prison in Stuttgart. Authorities said she committed suicide.

Habitat TV Plans Disrupted

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Preparations for television coverage of the Habitat conference were disrupted today when CBC television technicians failed to report for assignments.

"About 100 installer-wiremen and technical people did not report for this morning's shift," said Jean Benoit, international president of the National Association of Broadcasting Employees and Technicians.

Gerry Donohue, NABET regional director, said the workers reported to the CBC for work but refused jobs on the Habitat site where the CBC is the host broadcaster.

Byron Loe, co-ordinator of network services for NABET, said that, starting today, the union will not work at Habitat sites until the Anti-Inflation Board reinstates the full amount of the contract offered the union by the CBC.

The board cut the wage increase for NABET members to 13 per cent from 15 per cent in the first year of a two-year contract.

General Strike Talk Condemned

Talk of a general strike to protest government actions will only serve to inflame the labor scene, Labor Minister Allan Williams said Monday.

"And I don't believe the workers would support that kind of action," said Williams, adding he was surprised the B.C. Federation of Labor would come out with "that kind of statement."

Federation president George Johnston said over the weekend there is a broad feeling of frustration among the trade unions generally and a major form of protest — perhaps even a general strike — may be taken.

The labor movement's unhappy mood began with federal wage and price controls and now has been inflamed by the Social Credit government's Bill 22, preventing strikes and lookouts on the B.C. Railway for four years.

"It may be that the catalyst that would bring about a general strike in B.C. would be Bill 22," said Johnston.

Williams said the federation has a major leadership role to play in the province and he did not think "that role is being discharged with that kind of statement."

The minister said he fears the labor movement has not fully understood the meaning of Bill 22 — The Railway Operation Continuation Act — and he hopes to clear up the matter when it is discussed in the house later this week or next.

Williams said he hopes to meet with the eight unions involved on the B.C. Railway to discuss the bill but the unions have informed him they will not discuss the issue until he has met with the federation.

A meeting with the federation will therefore be arranged as soon as possible, he said.

Drug Policy for Schools

The Greater Victoria school board has drawn up a policy to allow principals to dismiss children caught with illegal drugs at school, even though that's what happens anyway.

Under the Public Schools Act, principals are already empowered to dismiss a student when he or she is in open opposition to the authority of the school.

But trustees asked the administration to come up with a policy. They discussed at committee level Monday and they'll likely approve it at a board meeting in two weeks, although trustee Dr. Mark Fisher doesn't think the policy will have any effect.

"If we want to have impact we have to engender fear of retribution for a specific act," said Fisher at the committee meeting Monday.

"Dismissal could almost become a matter of peer advantage . . . of peer admiration."

He questioned whether the board would be better to expell students, but superintendent Jake Longmore said expulsion is only used in extremely rare cases.

Dismissal can be ordered for a varying length of time and therefore some can be more severe than others.

"What's the point of engendering a policy that will have little effect?" asked Fisher.

Assistant superintendent Dr. John Wiens said the policy will help principals.

It states "any student found in possession of illegal drugs in school or during any school function may be immediately dismissed from school . . ."

Wiens said the policy represented "what any sensible parent would do in their own home . . . lower the boom. School is depended on to act as a surrogate parent when children are at school and the policy would help schools," he said.

Said Fisher: "Okay . . . shall we move on (to other business)?"

A new government agency spent $100,000 last year to collect $35,000 from people who had defaulted on provincial fines, Lorne Newsom, director of the year-old civil enforcement of fines division of the attorney-general's department, said Monday.

He said the division hit hardest at those who are contemptuous of the system.

"When people realize we're prepared to take them to court, they might be more willing to meet their obligations," said Newsom.

The eight-member agency, with ex-RCMP staff sergeants as collection officers, will take the first batch of 70 defaulters to court this month.

Newsom says 95 per cent of all fines are paid, while the remaining five per cent go to his agency for collection.

"We deal with the other five per cent," he said. "Most of them are law abiding citizens with monetary problems and some of them are outright crooks."

The agency was set up a year ago to initiate civil proceedings to collect bad debts through small claims court.

Willows Beach Fans Set for New Row

The Willows Beach Association is back in action to battle increased land-use densities in the popular beach area.

Immediately after a council meeting Monday night at which residents assailed plans for a new apartment in an existing apartment-zoned site at 2612 Thorpe Place at the north end of the beach, the association — first formed three years ago — drew itself together again.

R. D. Kilshaw, 2470 Beach Drive, was elected president, Mrs. Nan Ward, 2610 Beach Drive, secretary, and Mrs. D. R. Horton, 2633 Beach Drive, treasurer.

"We will investigate avenues to bring to council's attention the importance of preserving the beach area for recreational use," he said.

Permitting a new, larger apartment building on the site would be a "regressive mistake."

The present building, called Uplands Lodge, is an old house converted into apartments, he said. Its two-storey height compares with the three-storey 30-foot height permitted in the zoning.

But, he said, permitting 30-foot height at the front, and assuming a flat roof, would result in a much greater height at the back because the property is on a slope towards the beach.

Mrs. Horton told council it was the understanding of residents three years ago, when residences were downzoned from apartments to houses, that no further development would be allowed.

She said the seven existing apartment-zoned sites should stay as they are for the life expectancy of the buildings "and then revert to residences."

Mrs. Ward told council "three years ago we fought this battle, to keep this place, Willows Beach, as a place to enjoy. We understood, probably tacitly, not put in writing, these buildings would remain as they are, no additions."

Mayor Brian Smith said it may have been felt three years ago that everything was zoned single-family residential in the Willows Beach area but this was not the case.

All single-family dwellings on apartment-zoned sites were switched to single-family zoning, he said, but seven existing apartments and condominiums were left with their original zoning.

Council agreed to refer several letters to Committee A.

PAY 'STANDARD'

The $11,700 paid Peter Spratt on termination of his contract as principal of Capilano College was neither unusual nor unreasonable, the legislature was told Monday.

Spratt left the college last month after being awarded one year's salary in lieu of notice.

At that time, Education Minister Pat McGeer ordered an investigation into the severance pay and said he was shocked by the amount paid Spratt.

He tabled the report of the investigating committee on Monday which said Spratts' contract called for the one year's pay in lieu of notice and that the contract drawn up was fairly standard for principals at colleges across the country.

McGeer had no further comment.

Differing Views On Legal Drugs

Greater Victoria school trustees have asked their lawyer to determine whether a teacher, or the board, could be held liable for administering prescription drugs to children at school.

Vice-chairman Susan Brice said she was concerned about who would be held liable if an error was made in the administering the drugs and the child had a violent reaction.

She said she recently heard differing legal views on the matter, although when the board adopted a policy allowing school staff to administer drugs it was sure a teacher could not be held liable.

Trustee Peter Bunn said the policy was passed in 1974 and provided that school staff would only take the key cases of children that absolutely had to have drugs administered during school hours.

"I think it's a fair service being given."

A report from administration indicated only "those cases where a pupil requires oral medication in order to function satisfactorily in school activities" would administration of such medication be the responsibility of the principal.

A total of 94 students receive drugs from school staff, ranging from 25 students at Mount Douglas who receive aspirin to eight students at Victor elementary who receive medication all year.

Duncan Negotiators Begin Quiet Talks

DUNCAN — Mediator Clark Gilmour Monday drew a veil over re-scheduled negotiations aimed at solving a three-week strike of non-teaching school staffs in School District 65.

The two sides are in a three-day breather and will resume talks Friday.

School board secretary-treasurer W. F. Brown said the provincial mediator had made the special request for silence from both school district negotiators and International Woodworkers of America, which represents the 85 janitors, maintenance men and drivers who walked out April 21.

Negotiations were held Monday for the first time since April 14.

Meanwhile, 7,800 students are on part-time classes and all kindergartens are closed pending settlement of the dispute over wages.

MAIR DID PROMISE REVIEW: MAYORS

Aldermen who attended a meeting at which Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair spoke last week, have confirmed that he promised a "second look" at ferry fare increases.

Mair, however, sent a letter to the Colonist newspaper Monday denying a report which quoted him as promising the government would review the rate increases scheduled for June 1.

Mair admitted making an "off-the-cuff remark" to the effect the government would always take a second look "particularly when an injustice was alleged," but said he did not mean to convey the impresion the government was reviewing rates.

The reporter completely mis-understood his remarks, he said.

At least five delegates to the meeting of Vancouver Island Municipalities confirm that Mair promised the review. They include Campbell River Mayor Kenneth Forde, Courtenay city treasurer James Cuthbert and three other aldermen.

Barn Burns; 25 Rabbits, Sheep Die

An old barn at 4166 Kensington in Saanich burst into flame Monday afternoon killing 25 rabbits and two sheep trapped inside and destroying a small tractor and motorcycle.

Owner Nereo Dalle-Nese was in his house a couple of hundred feet away when he heard a noise outside and spotted the blaze at 5:30 p.m.

A Saanich fire department official said the fire could be seen from the fire hall on Vernon, a mile away. By the time firemen arrived the building was engulfed.

Cause of the fire hasn't been determined.

Firemen set the loss at $8,000.

Prepare for War, Chinese Warn

By ROSS H. MUNRO

PEKING — A Chinese vice-premier had a message for Canadians Monday night: prepare for a world war because its inevitable.

The message was conveyed to Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney by Chi Teng-kuei, an important figure in the Chinese political hierarchy who met the Prairie premier rather unexpectedly last night on the eve of Blakeney's departure from Peking for Shanghai and Canton.

The advice to Canada came at the end of a rather standard Chinese analysis of the current world situation outlined by Chi to Blakeney.

He put forward the view that the arms race was continuing, that detente between the Soviet Union and the United States was a sham . . ." Blakeney said later of his conversation with Chi.

The Chinese vice-premier described the Soviet Union in particular as aggressive, imperialistic and power grabbing. He also noted the continuing existence of economic classes in the world.

"He repeated his view that under those circumstances war was inevitable and that Canadians should prepare for it," Blakeney said.

The Saskatchewan visitor pressed Chi on how Canada should prepare "but he simply replied that we should prepare."

It is no secret, however, that China would like to see Canada increase its defence expenditures and play a larger role in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Games Work Still Cut Despite Injunction

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for the Olympic installations board said "there is still some small slowdown" in work at the Olympic stadium today despite a court injunction Monday against plumbers and electricians accused of work disruptions.

Jacques Désormeaux, board communications officer, said plumbers and electricians were on the job "and they are working, but not very fast."

The board got the injunction Monday, alleging the workers staged work slowdowns and commited acts of sabotage at the east-end Olympic park, site of the stadium and related facilities.

Victor Goldbloom, the Quebec minister responsible for the board, told reporters Monday the disruptions which began last Wednesday were of minor importance individually, but collectively had become a matter of deep concern.

He added that he did not feel the actions threatened the Summer Games themselves — schduled to open July 17 — but could affect the manner and comfort in which they are held and the functioning of equipment.

In its application to the Superior Court, however, the board said the slowdowns had been "of a nature to jeopardize and even prevent the Olympic Games."

The provisional injunction, granted by Mr. Justice Austin Johnson, names Local 144, United Association of Plumbers and Local 1677, Interprovincial Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, both affiliated with the Quebec Federation of Labor, the province's biggest labor organization.

It remains in effect until May 20, when a hearing will be held to determine whether a permanent injunction is necessary.

Spokesmen for the QFL — whose building trades council has been negotiating for a new province-wide contract with employer groups in the construction industry — denied any concerted action at the Olympic site.

A board legal spokesman said "either imprisonment or heavy fines" could result from any failure to comply with the injunction, which was served on the two unions, their business agents and delegates on the site and all the employees concerned.

Anyone knowingly contravening the orders would become subject to contempt of court civil action.

$3,278,839 Budget Set

Central Saanich council approved a 1976 budget totalling $3,278,839 Monday night, an increase which will raise the municipality's mill rate by about four per cent above last year's figure.

The mill rate for school was 44.430 compared with 42.951 in 1975; general purposes 39.154 compared with 37.143. Municipal finance authority .018, the same as last years.

Regional Hospital increased from .940 to 1.070, and assessment authority 1.55 from 21.170.

Total mill rate increase is 85.927 from 82.222.

It means a home owner paying $600 in taxes will pay $630.

MOST OPPOSE RE-ZONING AT ESQUIMALT HEARING

Esquimalt council is expected to resolve tonight its proposed down-zoning of 45 undeveloped high density apartment acres following a public hearing Monday attended by 450 residents.

Most of those attending the hearing opposed the plan to create two new zoning designations — R3TL townhouse and R3L low density apartment — while reducing density of R3 apartment zoning from 60 to 50 units an acre.

There are at present 50 acres of R3 apartment zoning in the municipality.

Density of R3TL townhouse zone would be nine units an acre, and R3L apartment zone could support only 12 units an acre.

The 45 acres included in council's proposal would affect 306 parcels of land now zoned for conventional apartment use.

"Don't you think it would have been fairer to apply the zoning changes uniformly?" H. G. Charania, 608-610½ Nelson, asked council.

He said low density apartment zoning throughout the 45 acres would have had a similar effect, raising density only 5 per cent above the desired level.

"I'd like to know who owns that property and how it remained untouched," Charania asked of the five acres excluded from the proposed rezoning.

Mayor Art Young said council was not aware generally who owned property involved in rezoning matters. Decisions were made aside from ownership considerations, and where there was conflict of interest members of council owning property involved in a proposal are excluded from deliberations, as has happened to two aldermen in this case.

A brief from the Salvation Army outlined a proposed 118-bed home for the elderly to take the place of Sunset Lodge, a 24-bed home on Gorge waterfront. There is urgent need in the community for such an establishment, with which the proposed zoning would be incompatible.

Plans for a combined apartment-commercial block on the site of Dominion Hall would be impeded, said Victoria Shipyard Workers Co-operative, owner of the building.

NDP Slams Bennett For 'Sell-Out' on Oil

Mair's Stand Blasted

Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair was accused Monday of letting down consumers by not fighting hard enough against price increases imposed by the provincial government.

"The minister should have raised a ruckus in cabinet opposing the attack which is taking place against the consumers in B.C.," Karen Sanford (NDP—Comox) told the legislature, during debate on his budget estimates.

"He should have opposed the 100 per cent increase in ferry rates, the 150 per cent increase in insurance rates and even the proposed $2-a-barrel increase for oil," Sanford said.

The minister replied that the cabinet had made the decisions and "I am proud of these decisions, I am pleased to have helped make them and I supported them."

Sanford said the minister had promised his government "would always take a second look, particularly when an injustice has been alleged.

"Well an injustice has happened, enough for a second, third and fourth look, and I expect the minister will stand in the cabinet and say "No more attacks on the consumers of this province."

She suggested that Mair has the authority, under the energy Act, to stop oil companies from passing on price increases to the consumers even if the provincial government's suggested $2-a-barrel increase for oil is accepted.

Sanford said any increases in prices hit people in the north and on northern Vancouver Island the most and pointed to the announced ferry increases which means a return trip to Vancouver for car and driver frm Port Alice, Port Mc McNeill or Port Hardy will cost $70.

"On top of that there will be increases in gas prices if the $2-a-barrel increase is accepted and if the minister does not use his power under the energy act," Sanford said.

"It is an attack on the consumers of the province, and for some it is financially crippling."

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson suggested that if the minister "is really concerned, he should explain why the cost of living has increased more in B.C. than in the rest of Canada recently."

"He should tell the consumers that the increase was due directly to the provincial government."

All three opposition party leaders attacked Premier Bennett Monday for his stand on increasing Canadian oil prices to world levels.

NDP finance critic Dave Stupich called it a "further sell-out to the oil companies which have admitted publicly to giving funds to the Social Credit party."

Liberal leader Gordon said there is no assurance oil companies would be required to use the increased profit from higher prices for further oil exploration.

And Tory leader Scott Wallace blasted Bennett for not caring about the well-being of Canadians outside B.C.

The premier said his government supports increasing the $8-a-barrel Canadian price of oil by $1.50 to $2 and eventually increasing it to the $13.50 world price.

B.C. also wants the federal government to eliminate part or all of the 10-cent-a-gallon gas tax at the pump in order to off-set the effects of the increased per barrel price.

In the legislature, Bennett said he believes in provincial rights in the natural resource field and he will not let the federal government try to take over that right.

He criticized the former NDP government for saying it would give Ottawa jurisdiction over petroleum resources if the federal government nationalized the resource.

But Stupich said his party believes energy resources are a special field which affect the Canadian economy as a whole and should be treated in the best way for all citizens.

The NDP supported an increase in natural gas prices, he said, because it would mean an increased return to B.C. citizens. But the price increase Bennett envisions would only increase oil company profits and hurt consumers, he said.

Gibson said Canada does have to work toward meeting world oil prices but said additional profits have to be channelled into further exploration.

Bennett's desire to remove the federal excise tax is just a way of trying to avoid taking responsibility for increasing the price of oil, he said.

Wallace said the Socreds are taking a "so what" attitude to other Canadians by suggesting a lifting of the 10-cent tax which is used to subsidize Eastern Canadian users of more expensive offshore oil.

The government keeps talking about supporting Canadian unity, said Wallace, and then takes the divisive attitude towards the remainder of Canada.

B.C. is also contradicting itself by voicing support for anti-inflation measures and then increasing the cost of gasoline, he said.

Increasing oil prices will mean increasing costs of production and make it even more difficult for Canadian producers to compete on world markets, he said.

YOUNG COUGAR CAUGHT

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — A provincial wildlife official captured a young male cougar with two tranquillizing bullets Monday night after the animal holed up at the end of a narrow alley between two buildings.

To get a clear shot at the cougar, Dan Lay of Nanaimo had to knock a hole in the wall of one of the buildings. The space between the buildings was about 18 inches.

Officials said the cougar, about four feet long and 50 pounds, was too young to be released in the woods.

Instead, it will be checked over by a veterinarian and probably go to a zoo.

The cougar was discovered by Shawn MacMillan, 10 and some friends. The boys said they came to within 10 feet of the cat before it retreated deeper into the space between the buildings.

The boys notified Glen MacMillan, 14, brother of Shown, and he and another 14-year-old, Peter Schulze, watched the animal for about half an hour before they contacted teacher Mike Putz who called police.

The teacher said the boys were hesitant to call the police at first because they thought the cougar might be shot.

Putz, who taught wildlife and outdoors to Glen MacMillan, said he was more scared of the animal than the boys. The cougar kept its distance, about 30 feet from the youths at one end of the alley.

The cougar was first seen in the area Sunday night by Elizabeth Wiebe whose pet poodle frightened it away when it came close to her back door.

PROTECT YOUTH — RESTORE LEGAL DRINKING AGE TO 21 — PROTECT YOUTH

PROTECT YOUTH

Lowering the age in 1970 in B.C. a great disservice. This forced drinking problems into earlier teens. Over 3600 violations by minors in B.C. in 1974-75 year. For the first time in our history we have teenage alcoholics.

Youth needs law protection. They are more susceptable to alcohol's damage than adults. They were kept from drinking by the law; it was an alibi for many. "Old Fools" fooled the young by underestimating its value. In Ontario alcohol involved collisions increased in the first year over 300%; 51% of all deaths in traffic were associated with alcohol and the increase was disproportionate for youth. Much crime, delinquency and arson is due to alcohol.

Policemen as Plumbers

Policemen have no business going through a newspaper's confidential files. That's the long and the short of it. Four RCMP officers walked into Toronto Sun editorial offices last Friday morning, read editor Peter Worthington his rights relating to the Official Secrets Act, and commenced a 4½-hour search for a letter that was the basis of a Sun editorial. The letter between General Michael Dare, head of the RCMP security service, and Robert Bourne, chief of the federal security advisory, referred to certain guidelines from the prime minister's office regarding investigations of Quebec separatists. A Sun editorial based on the letter alleged that Trudeau had ordered the RCMP to stop running checks on Quebec

Trudeau, who claimed the editorial was inaccurate, ordered an investigation of the leak, yet expressed shock that the RCMP would search the newspaper's office. The increasingly leaky Ottawa bureaucracy — another symptom that all is not well in the Liberal administration — appears to enrage the Trudeau administration. Each time something is covertly given to reporters or even when journalists dig out an embarrassing story, the government talks about an investigation. It is almost as though this administration has paranoid feelings that it is under siege.

If the prime minister had nothing to do with the raid on the Sun's office directly, he must have realized that an RCMP investigation into the incident would lead to the Toronto Sun. Where else? It should also be said that the correspondence in question was not top secret stuff, relating to military or industrial secrets. No, it was just a missive that could prove politioally embarrassing to the government. Yet the investigation is conducted under the auspices of the Official Secrets Act, a First World War relic relating to map secrecy and battle plans.

We are reluctant to say that the prime minister — his general antipathy for the press is well known — might have been trying to intimidate the Toronto Sun. Still, the suspicion remains. If this was just an isolated incident it might be explained by an over-zealous police force and an enraged prime minister. In October, 1972, however, members of the RCMP, Montreal city police, and the Quebec Provincial Police broke into the office of L'Agence de Presse Libre in Montreal without a warrant. At the time, all three police forces denied they had taken part in such an action. Only two years later did the truth surface in what was essentially a criminal act by three police forces.

Canadian media have no protection under law about the confidentiality of their sources. A court can and has ordered newsmen to reveal sources. Yet it is an ethic of the trade, and newsmen have gone to jail to prove it, not to reveal confidential sources of information. Without this anonymity granted to informants, many stories you read in daily papers would never see the light of day, such is the increasingly zealous secretiveness of all government levels. In the absence of official candor, it is a newspaper's duty to inform the public as fully as possible. If police forces, at the direction of government, can raid newspaper offices, there are bound to be fewer informants and less revelations about the manner in which we are governed.

At bottom in this issue, freedom of the press has been infringed by a petulant government. Not that any newspaper worth its salt will be intimidated by the Ruritanian methods of the investigation, but just how far will this administration go in tying the increasing number of loose ends unravelling from its administration? In future the government would be well advised to keep its agents away from newspapers. As there is a separation between church and state, there should be a gulf between newspapers and government.

Cheers

The motto of Victoria High School — come give a cheer — is about the best thanks which the thousands of old grads and friends of the school could tender to the dozens (hundreds?) of people who organized its centennial reunion. Make that three cheers and a tiger.

The students who took part in the lively musical show; those who organized the school's open house and afternoon tea at Government House; Peter Smith, who put together a bright anthology of pictures and prose to celebrate Vic High's 100 years; Lawrie Wallace, the deputy provincial secretary with previous experience in other centennial years (1958, 1967, 1971), committee chairmen and members who looked after the detail work — all deserve hearty thanks from the rest of us lookers-on. A truly wonderful time was had by all.

MAURICE WESTERN

Commons Family Matter

OTTAWA — It appears from the sympathetic observations of Ron Basford that the Law Reform Commission of Canada has succeeded in putting family law back on the parliamentary agenda.

If so, this is a rather surprising development. The present divorce legislation is only eight years old. Before it was enacted, parliament had displayed massive indifference to the subject for a century.

On introducing the reform bill in 1967 it was not passed until the following year. Pierre Elliott Trudeau, then minister of justice, noted that the western provinces, by and large, were governed by the laws of England as enacted in 1857 and modified in 1870. The same was true of Ontario. Pre-Confederation statutes preserved their vitality in the Maritimes. Even the laws of Quebec and Newfoundland, which had a special status, were of 1870 vintage.

Although the necessity of change was very widely recognized in 1967-68, an issue developed between two groups of reformers. It had long been argued by critics of the law, as it then existed, that recognized evils could best be dealt with by extending the permissible grounds for divorce. The legislation enacted in 1968 reflected this approach, although it was modified in one important respect.

Putting Asunder

A minority argued, however, for a more fundamental change. The most prominent exponents of this point of view were Andrew Brewin of the NDP and two Conservatives, Jed Baldwin and Gordon Fairweather. Their text was the report entitled Putting Asunder, the result of a two year study by a British committee of experts in a variety of fields. Appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1964, it submitted its recommendations in 1966. The timing was of significance because these developments in Britain immediately preceded the preparatory work in this country by a joint Senate-House committee.

There is a certain irony in what has now happened because the Law Reform Commission, after surveying the eight year experiment, has endorsed the major theme of the parliamentary minority of 1967-68. Basford also finds himself in a rather odd position because the most telling critic of the Putting Asunder approach was none other than the present prime minister.

It should be added, however, that the issue is not a partisan one. There was a feeling in 1967-68 that parliament, having turned a blind eye to the problem for so many decades, was taking a fairly bold step. Members generally were disinclined to go beyond the limited proposals placed before them by the minister of justice of that time.

Putting Asunder was radical in the sense that it proposed to dispense with the traditional concept of the "matrimonial offence" and, at the same time, with the adversary approach. Its authors, contending that existing law tended to confuse cause and effect, proposed to substitute the new concept of "marriage breakdown" as the basis for dissolution. This is also the view of the Law Commission.

RON BASFORD
. . . a liberal Liberal

But in one sense the reform of 1967-68 was a compromise. It added the ground of separation which could be said to reflect the marriage breakdown philosophy. The notion of guilt was, however, retained because the period of separation was to be three years for the innocent and five for the offending party.

In addition to endorsing marriage breakdown as the sole basis for dissolution, the commission makes detailed recommendations for unified family courts with superior court judges. These would have umbrella family law jurisdiction, including divorce, interspousal family matters, maintenance of dependents during marriage, matters dealing with children and other economic and social issues for which legal solutions must ultimately be provided.

This general approach was criticized in 1967-68, and doubtless will be again, on the ground that it would make divorce too easily obtainable. The commission says on that point:

"It is easily overlooked, however, that what we have now is divorce on demand when, in one way or another, the legal grounds, which may have little or nothing to do with the actual problems facing the spouses, are fulfilled. Most divorces are uncontested but many are based on a bargaining process, often harmful and expensive, that not only shatters the family but also its individual members. The fact that divorce is a painful process does not foster family stability in Canada. It only fosters pain."

Sticky Business

About 40 per cent of divorces nowadays are based on the ground of separation. In practice, however, this involves difficulties which were presumably not foreseen. The law discriminates against wives, since most are dependent and lack the resources to leave their homes even when they find domestic situations intolerable. To leave, in most provinces, is to surrender any claim to maintenance although marriage itself may have impaired the ability of the wife to provide for herself.

The requirement of isolation is also, in the commission's view, illogical. As the report puts it: "It is significantly more likely that divorce will ensue when married persons with family problems are separated than when they remain together. The present marriage breakdown rules tend to guarantee the outcome the law ostensibly seeks to prevent."

Basford's reaction suggests once again that he is eager to make his mark as a liberal minister of justice. On the other hand, parliament is not much enamored of these highly controversial social issues and, in the matter of divorce laws, cabinet has nothing like the incentive of sheer embarrassment that it has in the case of those dealing with crimes of murder.

Thus, while the report probably means that divorce is back on the agenda, it may not achieve a high priority. It is also possible that there may be more enthusiasm for testing the provinces on the matter of family courts than for tackling the always sticky business of divorce law.

Ferry Services

I would like to express some concern over the change in service and rates affecting the B.C. Ferries. It is understandable that rates should be increased to meet rising costs, and the concept that the service should be self-sustaining is commendable. Whether it is realistic in the case of public transportation is another thing.

Transportation Minister Jack Davis has assessed camper and truck rates on the basis of their respective lengths, which seems reasonable. Why has he not done this in the case of automobiles escapes me. Surely the family that conserves essential petroleum supplies by driving a Volkswagen deserves a better deal than the one in the Cadillac.

One of the rare delights of travelling between Calgary and Victoria is to dine on board the ferry while travelling through the Gulf Islands. If he loses customers through higher rates and loss of services, gross revenue may be well below the double-take you expect.

Lastly, removal of the midweek reduction strikes me as an invitation to chaos. Presumably, it was put there in the first place to "spread the load" away from weekend jam-ups. — Grant Fawcett, Calgary, Alberta.

Good Legislation

If our new Socred government can eliminate strikes and lockouts they will be the most popular government in Canada. Ask any union worker (who is not fanatical or communist), and they will agree that they do not want any strikes or lockouts to threaten their take-home pay.

We say our society is sick, but nothing is done about it. Surely it is a sick society that permits a union leader to force the union members to strike and sometimes lose their homes and partly paid-for cars, boats, etc.

Lets cure the sickness by backing the good legislation of Bill 22. — C. S. Vickery, 3772 Tillicum Road.

Students' Choice

Recently, both editorially (April 3) and in the Editor's Notebook (May 1), your paper has expressed an understandable concern that students studying at the University of Victoria should have an adequate opportunity to study Canadian literature. You quoted the Symons Report to the effect that no English Department in Canada offers more than 10 per cent of its courses on subjects concerning Canadian literature. More important, however, than the number of courses offered is the number of students who take them.

The Department of English at the University of Victoria offers, at all levels, courses which include the study of Canadian literature, so that a student who chooses to do so may take at least one each year he is at university. Introductory first year literature courses involve the study of some Canadian fiction or poetry in about 80 per cent of the sections offered; there is a multi-section second year survey of Canadian literature, which can be taken for general interest, but can also serve as an entry to either a major or honors degree in English; and there are four senior courses concerned with more specialized consideration of Canadian figures and themes.

Because most of the department's students are enrolled in multi-section first and second year courses, in any one year not less than 40-45 per cent of students taking literature courses will make some contact with the work of Canadian writers. Furthermore, since these courses are freely available at all levels, the final decision as to the extent of the department's offerings in Canadian literature will be made in the way it should be — by the choice of young Canadian students. — Michael R. Best, Department of English, University of Victoria.

Outer island residents hurt most by ferry fare hikes.

Ferry High

The provincial government's most recent violation of the federal anti-inflationary guidelines, i.e.—removal of commuter tickets while doubling ferry rates — results in a 367 per cent increase to the residents of Pender, Galiano, Mayne and Saturna Islands.

A round trip for car and driver between Swartz Bay and the Outer Islands goes from $3 to $14.

Thirty-three and one-third to commercial vehicles and 100 per cent to Vancouver Island residents is bad enough. But 367 per cent to outer island residents? Why should the outer Islands residents not have commuter tickets?

For one thing, the ferry is virtually their only access to any B.C. highway. There are no highways on those islands. There are no hospitals, no dentists, no prescription pharmacists and unless some semi-retired doctor moves to one of the islands and decides to practice — no doctors.

There are no banks, no provincial offices or outlets of any kind, no resident Hydro repair, no resident police except in holiday seasons, and the only retail outlets are small general stores.

There are many rural areas of British Columbia with such limited local facilities but no one would think of charging them a highway access toll, which is virtually what the Gulf Islands ferry fare is.

Island residents have long accepted the $3 toll. How can they be asked for $14?

Two days before the blow was struck the minister quoted rates to cross the English Channel (on non-government-owned ferries). To equate a trip from England to France with a trip to the nearest dentist in one's own electoral district is outright charlatanism. — Mrs. N. Hooper, 98 Moss Street.

Food Additives

In the Times of May 5, in the section Food and Nutrition a Dr. Clydesdale defends chemical additives in food. The reasons given are very unscientific. They would not hold up in a debate with Dr. Paavo Airola, world famous nutritionist for instance and many more too well-known to mention.

Recently Dr. Frederick Stare, head nutritionist at Harvard University, convinced enough Americans that it was perfectly safe to eat chemical additives that the Kellog Co. sent Harvard a check for $2 million. Is Dr. Clydesdale fishing for the same for the University of Massachusetts?

How big money rules our lives! The only reason chemicals are added to food is that profits are enhanced hundreds of millions of dollars thereby. The FDA protection of the public is a mirage! And the AMA plays ball with the large vested interests too. One wonders if the CMA is the same.

The U.S. is not the best fed nation on earth. They are 21st on the list of healthy nations, eating more chemicals than any other nation and dying of every conceivable disease known to man. In Hunza the people are the healthiest in the world. In their 2000-year history they have never experienced a single disease Western man is heir to. Competent medical research proved that it takes faulty food to produce sickness, and was not to be found anywhere in Hunza. Foods consumed in their natural state without chemical additives was the answer!

Dr. Hill comes on television screaming quack, quack, because laetrile is cutting into the profits of radiologists, surgeons etc. All the reason for it being banned by the FDA was that it was worthless. It is certain that orthodox medicine will never find a cure for cancer as long as the millions keep pouring in from the fight cancer with a cheque and a checkup. Cancer is being cured in clinics in Europe as well as arthritis, which M.D.s tell us here is incurable. Who are the quacks anyhow?

And then in another section it says burgers, fries and shakes not all that bad. Junk food! I have not had a cold in 25 years. Beat that you sacrosanct MDs. — Hugh F. Hoag, 740 Middleton Street.

Guns Down Under

Note the current raging controversy over proposed new laws in Canada (or is it only B.C.?) relating to the ownership of guns.

I would like to comment that New Zealand has possibly the toughest laws in the western world covering the ownership of rifles and handguns. Such laws are rigidly enforced.

The writer lived for some six years in New Zealand during the 1950s. My own impression was that I have never lived in a country where there were more firearms. And, most of these were illegal!

This after all, is human nature. I know that back in prim old Queensland where my residence is, they used to ban certain books. To ensure the immediate best seller grading, it became fashionable for authors to seek to have their books banned!

Prohibition in the U.S. had a similar moral lesson.

A comparison of fatality rate in relation to firearms, in N.Z. and Canada, might prove informative to those on both sides of the fence. — Les Haines, 425 Quebec Street.

B.C., Ontario Preach Old Welfare Gospel

By LEONARD SHIFRIN

OTTAWA

Can you imagine a tax statute which simply left the question of how much money a taxpayer should be assessed to the discretion of tax department bureaucrats?

Would such a system be any more acceptable if, instead of having an unfettered personal discretion, the officials were generally bound by departmental guidelines whose contents were not available to the public?

I don't think the answers are in much doubt.

Rule by public law and not by either bureaucratic whim or secret regulation is far too well entrenched in Canadian public values for any government to dare even suggest such a system, let alone for the country to agree to it.

Except, that is, in the case of our welfare laws.

In fact, until a few years ago, it was almost a misnomer to describe these as laws at all. They were really little more than blanket authorizations of administrative discretions, implemented according to unpublished directives.

The coming of law 'n order to the social assistance field only began with the passage of the federal government's Canada Assistance Plan in 1966.

As a condition of paying half the bills, Ottawa insisted that provincial welfare programs operate on the basis of defined standards for determining eligibility and benefit entitlements, and that unsuccessful applicants have a right of appeal to an independent tribunal.

Progress is Slow

Although the federal money began flowing 10 years ago, it wasn't until last year that the last of the provinces implemented its 1966 commitment to establish an appeals system. And progress in areas less visible than the presence or absence of an appeal board has been even slower.

But if governments were barely moving, they were at least facing in the right direction — toward a professed goal of adequate assistance, in dignity, for those in defined circumstances.

That's why recent events in Ontario and British Columbia are so disturbing. In both provinces new welfare ministers have begun preaching the old gospel of welfare workers' discretion.

And they are not just preaching it. They have begun turning back the clock and reintroducing it over the objections of the very social workers to whom the discretion to "play God" with the lives of recipients is being given.

James Taylor, the Ontario welfare minister, has broadened the discretionary powers of workers to refuse welfare to those who are employable and to young people, employable or not.

He has also talked of extending this to female-headed families — giving welfare officials the power to decide that a mother should no longer stay home to care for her children or that an older child should go to work to support the family.

In British Columbia, Welfare Minister William Vander Zalm has directed his welfare workers to refuse assistance to employable recipients who fail to conform to "suitable" dress and grooming standards.

Conceding that there would be situations in which the welfare worker's judgment "may not be correct," he asserted that "the alternative is to have no control over these people."

'A High Price'

It was concern about the extent to which welfare departments already exert "control over these people" that led to the study released several weeks ago by the Canadian Civil Liberties Association.

Entitled "Welfare Practices and Civil Liberties," it is the product of a three-year survey carried out in five provinces. Its finding: "Canadian welfare systems are exacting a high price in civil liberties for the provision of subsistence income."

On freedom of privacy it notes that, "strictly speaking, welfare recipients have the same rights as everyone else to the privacy of their homes." But when welfare department investigators come around, "the exercise of such rights can result in the valid termination of welfare assistance."

On the consequences of denying occupational freedom by requiring that employable recipients accept any available job, it describes the case of a 16-year-old girl who quit her job because her supervisor (also female) "would not keep her hands off me." The welfare department ruled that these grounds "were not serious enough to warrant quitting," and held her ineligible for assistance.

The civil liberties report details a variety of infringements of substantive freedoms — from where receipients may live to where they may shop and what they can buy.

Moreover, it says, "the procedures by which welfare decisions are made depart substantially from the common law requirements of due process . . . In some respects, in some departments, the common law requirement of a fair hearing, or its equivalent, is virtually non-existent."

This survey was carried out from 1971 through 1973, a period when the tide was flowing most strongly in the direction of recognizing the right of recipients to receive assistance in dignity. (1971 was the year of the Senate Poverty Committee report.)

It was the year two different federal-provincial task forces reached identical conclusions as to the importance of welfare eligibility requirements and benefit entitlements being clearly and publicly defined according to objectively ascertainable criteria.

Destructive System

It was nonsense, the task forces reported, to talk of a rehabilitative role for a welfare system which was itself destructive of individual assertiveness and self-respect.

Unlike the Civil Liberties Association, these task forces were not primarily concerned with abstract notions of law and justice. Rather, they were moved by empirical evidence of the debilitating effect on individuals of helpless, humiliating dependency on the approbation of all-powerful officials.

Treating recipients as alms-seeking supplicants and subjecting them to succession of investigative indignities, said their reports, compounds the consequences of whatever factors forced them into the situation of welfare dependency in the first place.

That was five years ago.

How much of the modest progress there has been since then will be lost in the present backward lurch of the pendulum?

Mr. Taylor can't tell us. He says the civil liberties study is "unrepresentative."

He also admits he hasn't read it.

Switzerland: Wheeling, Dealing Nation

By ROD CHAPMAN
Manchester Guardian

A world imperialist power, ruled by an oligarchy whose sole aim is to make as much money as possible, a country which promotes injustice in the third world. These charges are levelled against Switzerland in a remarkable book published by a Geneva Socialist deputy in the Swiss national parliament, Jean Ziegler.

Its author is virtually the only leftwing political gadfly in Swiss national political life. The Alpine climate does not seem to be conducive to the health of such a species. Every Swiss worth his fondue dons a consensus of views which he wears like a suit of armor. Helvetic infallibility does not brook dissidents.

Ziegler has tabled a parliamentary question on the activities of the Iranian secret police in Switzerland. In March he asked why the Swiss authorities had allowed in General Spinola who, he claims, was organizing support for a coup from his present Swiss base, and the government has now reacted, and Spinola is being deported.

The folkloric image of a Switzerland clanging with cowbells, inhabited by peasants who make chocolate, cheese, and watches, has long since given way to a twentieth-century picture of an independent, slightly aloof nation of resourceful craftsmen and financiers.

Ziegler's new book — A Switzerland Above All Suspicion — claims that a wealthy, powerful oligarchy uses the Swiss national character, neutrality and reputation for humanitarian acts to its own ends.

These monster gnomes, he says, try to pass themselves off at home and abroad as pious philanthropists with their faces masked by the Red Cross flag. Yet the Swiss multinationals, such as Nestle and the Basel chemical companies, are the second wave of imperialism after the Americans, while Switzerland, from being the world's banker, has become the world's receiver (or "fence," which the French word also means).

The banks of Zurich, Geneva, Basel, or Lugano finance drug trafficking, arms trafficking, and Mafia rackets, according to the book. And Swiss banking laws — especially the tandem of banking secrecy and numbered accounts — are specifically designed to encourage the flight of capital legally or illegally into Switzerland.

Ziegler tries to explode a number of Swiss legends. It is not a classless society, he says, it's simply that the Swiss working class had been conned into adopting the consensus dictated by the oligarchs. Strikes are virtually banned in Switzerland by collective contracts dating back over thirty years.

The much-vaunted Swiss democratic system is also, he claims, a myth. Participation in referenda and elections is low, and parliament is a closed shop which has been colonized by the industrial oligarchs who control the country. Less than 200 people occupy most of the key posts in the Swiss economy. When the federal cabinet is elected, there is traditionally only one candidate for each post (a system Swiss politicians castigate in Eastern Europe).

The demons of the piece are the empire-building Swiss banks, whose power is enormous—in 1974, the total turnover of the five leading multinational banks was equal to over 85 per cent of the Swiss GNP. Nobody knowns how much foreign money there is in Switzerland, nor how many fortunes have been shipped there: Peron, Haille Selassie, Trujillo, Farouk, and a host of others are said to have contributed to the money the Swiss banks now use as capital.

Ziegler accuses the banks of having been instrumental in the overthrow of Salvador Allende (to whom the book is dedicated) by cutting credit. No neutrality there.

Meanwhile companies like Nestle, he claims, play their part by establishing virtual monopolies in certain industries in developing countries and helping only the rich there. The Swiss press plays along with the system: the book quotes the example of the Swiss multinational Alusuisse trying to clear aborigines off their land in Australia with the verbal support of the Neue Zuercher Zeitung, Switzerland's most prestigious daily.

HAPPY DAYS ARE COMING

By ANNE CRITTENDEN
New York Times

The message is unfashionably optimistic, delivered by a man who became famous analyzing the most pessimistic of possibilities — nuclear war.

The medium is Herman Kahn's latest book, The Next 200 Years, conceived by the Hudson Institute futurologist and his associates as an answer to the doomsday theorists. The book was unveiled at a conference at Rockeller University last week.

Human society, as Kahn sees it, is well on its way to the millennium. Or in Kahn's words, "200 years ago almost everywhere human beings were comparatively few, poor and at the mercy of the forces of nature and 200 years from now, we expect, almost everywhere they will be numerous, rich and in control of the forces of nature."

While there may be some obstacles on the road from here to there, Kahn sees the way as essentially clear. He expects world population growth to peak in the next five years and world economic growth to reach its height a few later, with both gradually stabilizing in the 22nd century at a level of unprecedented affluence.

The world's resources, Kahn's analysis shows, are more than sufficient to meet the food, energy and raw material needs of the expected population of 15 billion by 2176.

Most of the participants at last week's symposium generally supported this sanguine outlook for world resources, including Donald Paarlberg, director of agricultural economics at the U.S. department of agriculture and an authority on the world food situation.

Adam Yarmolinsky of the University of Massachusetts warned, however, that the "dangers of complacency may be as great as, or even greater than, the dangers of despair." People have a better chance of achieving an idyllic future, he added, if they focus as well on the more pressing problems of the present, including the loss of confidence in rational attempts to deal with them.

Kahn himself has conceded that his book is "a very limited book" that attempts only to refute the Malthusian notion that population and economic growth are on a collision course with a scarcity of resources. It does not deal with what Kahn sees as "the real issues" which are questions of ideology and understanding.

He is particularly concerned with the possibility of inadvertent damage to the global environment, such as unforeseen changes in climate, and with the risk of nuclear war, "the largest single problem facing mankind."

A recent study at the Hudson Institute recommends that all nations must agree to renounce the first use of nuclear weapons and to retaliate appropriately against any nation that strikes first.

But the major theme of "the next 200 years" is that the world is a place of abundance, not scarcity, so Kahn calls on Americans to stop feeling guilty about consuming 40 per cent of the earth's raw materials although Americans are only six per cent of its population.

On the contrary, the concentration of wealth and consumption in the rich nations offers the only realistic hope the poor have to climb out of poverty, Kahn maintains. They need the industrialized world for its markets, capital, technology and tourists, for its import of unskilled labor and for its export of industry, he says.

Far from being desirable, attempts to establish more equality among nations (such as massive resource transfers or deliberately slower growth in the industrialized world) can only have a harmful effect on the well being of all, Kahn asserts.

"The most important point we want to make," he told his audience, largely businessmen, is that "the strongest force for accelerated development is the so-called income gap between nations."

Wage Control Program?

harry bruce

HALIFAX — While your friendly ex-auditor-general, Maxwell Henderson, has called the Prime Minister "an illiterate economist" who hasn't the foggiest idea of what's going on beyond the Anti-Inflation Program, an outfit called the Manpower Temporary Services Research Council has come up with some statistics about the program which doubtless turn labor's stomach.

The Council surveyed companies in manufacturing, marketing, sales, service and communications industries, and certain government enterprises as well. The companies employed anywhere from 100 to 5,000 people, and most of their staff were union members. The anti-inflation guidelines would be mandatory for 81 per cent of these enterprises.

The surprise is that, despite the past winter's chorus of horror about the murder of the free enterprise system, the survey suggests the business community thinks the Anti-Inflation Program is a pretty good idea. And many firms appear to like it for precisely the reason labor hates it: it's more likely to hold down wages than either prices or profits.

Or, as Mr. Henderson says, "Looks primarily like a wage control program."

Every firm that the Manpower Temporary Services Research Council polled replied that, yes, inflation was so serious it warranted "some form of federal action." Nobody said no. Nobody even said they didn't know. The business community was 100 per cent behind government action to fight inflation.

Moreover, 78.4 per cent believed the controls would actually stem inflation. Only 5.4 per cent said they would not. And to the amazement of those who recall January's bleating by certain business leaders about the impending death of Canadian democracy, 83.8 per cent said the current controls were either "about right" or, indeed, "not stringent enough."

Almost 65 per cent did not think the legislation gave excessive discretionary power to the Anti-Inflation Board and, while 27 per cent felt the program would depress business investment, 43.2 per cent felt it would not. More than 70 per cent believed the controls would affect their companies either "moderately" or "very little."

Again, although the controls appear to some (including me) as a nightmare of bureaucratic jargon, the survey suggests that nearly 80 per cent of the business community feels that administering the program will impose on companies only "minimal" or "moderate" additional expense.

But if labor needed confirmation of its worst fears, it could find it in the businessmen's replies to the questions about exactly which ingredients of inflation the program was most likely to control.

While 45.9 per cent thought the program would hold down prices and 40.5 per cent felt it would hold down profits, more than 81 per cent also thought it would control wages. And there it is, right from management's mouth, just what labor has insisted all along.

In labor's opinion, there's small wonder why the business community finds the controls if not palatable at least edible. Management negotiators, says Ed Johnston, spokesman for the Canadian Labor Congress, are "becoming increasingly aware of the true meaning of the anti-inflation farce and are using the controls as a club to beat wage and salary earners over the head."

But the board's rulings are so capricious, Johnston says, that it's conceivable even the weather is having "a profound impact" on its decisions. His advice to union negotiators: bargain as fiercely as ever. Bargain just as you would if there were still no such thing as the federal Anti-Inflation Program.

More than 60 per cent of the business community, as represented by the survey of the Manpower Temporary Services Research Council, felt the controls should last for at least two years; but, in the jolly spirit of confrontation that's gathering force, I think we can look forward to several more winters of our discontent than that, and several more long hot summers.

Sort of makes you want to just pack up your wife and family and get away from it all, eh? Yes, just crack open the kids' piggy bank, tighten your belt, and head off to some friendly place where beaches are beaches, folks are folks, the living is easy, and the snow never falls. One of the better shores in Jamaica would do.

Granduc Mines

Granduc Mines recorded a loss of $190,000 or six cents a share in the first quarter of 1976, president J. Norman Hyland told the annual meeting.

He said the loss was substantially less than the previous quarterly loss and that the company is hopeful of a continuing improving trend.

An upward trend in the price of copper is contributing to the improvement, Hyland said, but was disappointed that the provincial government had not acted to reduce royalties.

Eacom Timber

Eacom Timber Sales Ltd., Canada's third largest lumber shipper, experienced declines in shipments to all markets with the exception of the United States east coast, says company president Donald King.

King said Friday that company president Donald Eacom shipped 213 million board feet of lumber in 1975, compared with 317 million last year, a 33 per cent decline.

The value of these shipments was down 42 per cent, from $62 to $36 million, and plywood sales remained constant at seven million square feet, he said.

"Our forecast of 1.5 million housing starts in the U.S. last year actually closed at a dismal 1.1 million, a disastrous level in this industry," said King. "Where we had hoped for a slight increase, we actually experienced a slight decrease."

He predicted an almost two-fold increase in lumber shipments this year to 420 million board feet and a 16 per cent increase in plywood shipments to eight million board feet.

Pato Consolidated

Pato Consolidated Gold Dredging Ltd. has reported income of $2.6 million or 74 cents a share for 1975, compared with $1.7 million or 50 cents a share in 1974.

The company's annual report said the increase was due mainly to the non-recurrence of a provision for possible loss on securities made in 1974.

The report said a dividend of 20 cents a share was paid April 4, 1975, and one of 25 cents Dec. 19, 1975. A further dividend was 20 cents was declared Feb. 23, 1976, payable March 23 to record holders March 8, 1976.

Pato is a Vancouver-based firm involved in South American mining activities.

Furniture, Soap and Paint. They made Laurel Point a landmark.

Yes, Laurel Point has played an important part in Victoria's economy for about a century. Furniture, soap and paint probably sound pretty prosaic to a lot of people, but there are lots of interesting stories behind them.

Jacob Sehl first saw Victoria during the gold rush as a young miner on his way to strike it rich. Instead, he became a prosperous manufacturer of quality furniture. He turned Laurel Point, a "barren, rocky spot", into a beautiful garden surrounding his large factory and stately mansion.

Several years later a young Englishman had his chance to make his dreams come true on Laurel Point. His name was Pendray . . . and the rest is history. Within a year his House of Pendray on Laurel Point was manufacturing paint as well as soap, and paint production became one of the most important industries in Victoria for quite a few years.

Furniture, soap and paint made Laurel Point a landmark in the past - and today Laurel Point is a landmark once again. New townhouses and condominiums soon to be surrounded by a landscaped park form one of three focal points on the Inner Harbour. The Empress Hotel, the Parliament Buildings, and now Laurel Point - an elegant new landmark on Victoria's Inner Harbour.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

"A man who has 17 capsules of heroin is a menace to the public," Judge Blake Allan said Monday in Victoria provincial court as he refused continued bail for a 23-year-old Victoria man.

Allan spoke after Douglas James Pruden, 3134 Alder, pleaded guilty to separate charges of possession of 17 capsules of heroin and a small amount of marijuana March 12 at his residence.

Defence lawyer Jacquie Dorgan asked for a presentence report before sentence. Prosecutor Malcolm Macaulay didn't oppose the idea and Allan agreed, saying sentence would be pronounced May 31.

Dorgan then asked that the $1,000 surety bail set March 12 for Pruden be continued until sentencing. Again, Macaulay didn't oppose the idea but this time, Allan did.

The judge said those who use heroin "support themselves by dishonest acts in most cases" and the public is "exposed to the risk" of such acts.

Macaulay said police "forcibly entered and searched" the residence about midnight March 11. In a basement bedroom occupied by Pruden, one balloon containing seven capsules was found on the floor near where Pruden was standing and a second with 10 capsules was found behind a chair. The marijuana was in a dresser drawer.

The prosecutor said 17½ capsules of heroin were found, and he quoted police as setting a street value of $50 a capsule for a total of $875. Dorgan said her client told her there were 17 capsules at $45 each "for a maximum of $765."

A stay of proceedings was entered against another person charged with Pruden in the heroin matter.

Allan refused bail for Robert Archibald Brook, 24, of West Vancouver, on a two-count charge of conspiracy to import and traffic in marijuana which had been set for a three-week preliminary hearing in July but now may be delayed until October through lack of court space.

Brook and five others were charged in April with importing marijuana. On that charge, which is still alive, bail was refused for Brook and one other man and set for two more men and two women.

On the new charge, the women have been released on the same terms while bail hearings have not yet been held for the other three men. Allan remanded both charges to next week when bail for the three may be considered and hearings dates confirmed.

Kenneth Leon Washington, 30, a U.S. citizen living in Vancouver, pleaded guilty to an Immigration Act charge of returning to Canada late in April after being deported Feb. 18.

Prosecutor Robert Taylor said Washington entered Canada in October, 1974, for a two week visit and remained 16 months before a deportation inquiry. He said Washington was discovered back in Canada when Saanich police arrested him April 30 on another matter.

Allan sentenced Washington to pay a $300 fine or serve one month in jail. Washington asked for three weeks to pay the fine although he has been denied bail pending a trial in July on the Saanich charge.

In the court section of Judge Douglas Campbell, Donald Gerard Lenihan, 20, of 957 Meares, was put on probation to Sept. 1 and ordered to repay $1,605 to the Unemployment Insurance Commission by Aug. 31.

Lenihan pleaded guilty April 8 to a two-count Victoria charge of fraud in the receipt of $1,605 in unemployment insurance benefits between Aug. 5 and Oct. 20, 1975.

Court was told Lenihan took over payments to another person when the latter left Canada. It was also informed the matter was discovered when an unemployment insurance worker, by coincidence, picked up a piece of paper while walking on Fort Street. The paper contained information about the benefits.

BCR Eyes 4-Year Go-Slow

VANCOUVER (CP) — Union spokesman Glen Bowles said Monday that if proposed British Columbia Railway legislation adopted by the legislature, a work-to-rule on BCR will continue for the entire four-year period planned for the legislation.

Bowles, general chairman of the United Transportation Union, issued the warning as BCR spokesman Hugh Armstrong said the railway was being "badly tied up" by the work-to-rule, which began last week.

"The railway is running well below its normal efficiency level," said Armstrong. He did not give percentages.

He said the backlog has been worsening each day since the UTU trainmen began their campa ign to protest introduction of the bill.

BCR reported that between 6 a.m. Sunday and 6 a.m. Monday, crews stopped 14 times for their meals, averaging an hour for each stop.

The legislation, if passed, will ban strikes on the property for four years, refer unresolved contract disputes to binding arbitration and set up a commission to straighten out BCR's labor relations programs.

The main issue in dispute is the UTU demand for payment of overtime on a daily basis. The UTU is the last of 11 unions to resolve its contract, which expired July 31, 1975.

The UTU, which has insisted on direct negotiations with BCR, is working to rule by stopping through trains for meal breaks when they normally keep running. In addition, UTU trainmen are being more deliberate in signalling the enginemen during switching operations in the yards.

The rail unions have obtained the backing of the B.C. Federation of Labor, whose spokesmen have threatened a general strike unless the bill is dropped.

Bowles said the threat to work-to-rule through the entire period of the legislation "is not just coming from union leaders. It's coming from the people out on the job."

"They are beginning to like the idea of stopping for meals and might want to continue it when things get back to normal," said Bowles. "They are beginning to feel like white men when they can go into a cafe for a decent meal instead of eating on the fly."

In Victoria, Labor Minister Allan Williams said in an interview the legislation won't be used as a bargaining tool and won't be withdrawn in the face of a threat to call a general strike.

He described the federation's threat to call a general strike as irresponsible.

MD HEARING OPENS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Human Rights Commission said Monday the College of Physicians and Surgeons of B.C. is more interested in protecting established doctors than in providing medical servies in remote areas.

At issue is a requirement by the college that immigrant doctors must practise north of Ashcroft, 130 miles northeast of here, until they become Canadian citizens.

Lawyer Don Sorochan, representing the commission, told a hearing that the requirement should be found invalid on the grounds that it restricts personal mobility and contravenes basic human rights.

If the policy is aimed solely at delivering medical services where needed, it could be equally applied to newly-qualified Canadian doctors, he said.

The hearing, chaired by Leon Getz, head of the provincial Law Reform Commission, is the first in which the Human Rights Commission, and advisory body to the government, is acting as a party to the complaint.

ICBC Fraud Plea

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stuart Trober, 30, an adjuster for the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, pleaded guilty in provincial court Monday to conspiring to defraud the government insurance company by submitting fraudulent claims for repair work.

Also charged are David Sharm, 30, an estimator, Stanley Kadlec, 25, and Tri Starr Collision Repairs Ltd. of nearby Richmond.

Teen-age Protest

NELSON (CP) — Eight teenagers protesting outside the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla) in Burnaby during the weekend did so without their parent's knowledge or consent, one of the fathers said Monday.

John Chernoff of Krestova said that none of the eight Sons of Freedom Doukhobors told their parents they were going "because they probably afriad their parents wouldn't allow it, and we wouldn't."

He said he couldn't blame his son, Harvey, 18, because "his mother could die in there."

$27M Centre Eyed

SURREY (CP) — Council in this Vancouver-area municipality Monday gave approval in principle to a federal offer to build a $27 million rehabilitation centre here.

Mayor Ed McKitka said the centre would include a maximum-security rehabilitation centre, a reception block, staff training centre and RCMP college. It would primarily house first offenders.

Whirlpool Drowned Canoeists

LYTTON (CP) — An RCMP spokesman said Monday that two canoeists who drowned Sunday might have survived if they had told police they intended to run the Fraser River to this community 95 miles northeast of Vancouver.

Tibor Baranyi, 22, of Vancouver, and Ian Henry Griffiths, 21, of Toronto, are missing and presumed drowned after their 16-foot canoe hit a surging whirlpool, spun around and overturned Sunday.

The pair were attempting to run the flood-swollen river from Lillooet, 40 miles north of here. The accident happened six miles from their goal.

They were canoeing with Baranyi's 23-year-old brother Geza and Gordon Vander Sar, 23, of Vancouver who were in a 13-foot canoe.

"It would have been nice if they had told us they were planning to go down the river," Constable Jerry Wilkie said Monday. "Then we could have watched them come down and maybe helped them."

The shorter canoe was spun around three times in the same whirlpool but stayed upright. Geza Baranyi and Vander Sar paddled furiously to catch their stranded comrades, but the current swept the overturned canoe too swiftly down the river.

All four were wearing lifejackets.

Remparts Get Look at Big, Bad Bruins

MONTREAL (CP) — The word around the National Hockey League a few years ago was watch the big, bad Bruins.

And today it's likely you'd get the same reaction from Quebec Remparts in their description of the New Westminster club of the same name that appears determined to emulate its NHL counterpart in this year's Memorial Cup tournament.

New Westminster Bruins, the rugged Western Canada Hockey League champions, displayed almost complete control as they defeated the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League champion Remparts 4-2 Monday night in the second game of the weeklong round-robin tournament that will decide this year's national junior champion.

The Bruins ran up a 4-1 first-period score against the Remparts and then appeared to coast for the better part of the remaining two periods of the fight-filled contest.

Defenceman Barry Beck, Harold Phillipoff, centre Clayton Pachal and Richard Shinske all beat Quebec netminder Maurice Barrette.

Phillipoff scored while the Bruins held a one-man advantage as Quebec defenceman Jean Gagnon served a penalty, while Pachal got his goal while the New Westminster club was playing two men short. Pachal's team-mates Don Hobbins and Bruce Andres were in the penalty box at the time.

Denis Turcotte scored a power-play goal for the losers in the first period while Jean Chouinard added the second Quebec goal at 19:01 of the second.

Glen Hanlon, the goaltender picked up by the Bruins from Brandon Wheat Kings for the national final, had a much easier time than Barrette. The Bruins outshot the Remparts 42-25.

Referee Blair Graham of Oakville, Ont., called a dozen major penalties for fighting, plus 17 minors.

The Bruins now meet Hamilton Fincups of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior series Wednesday night. The loss to New Westminster left the Remparts with one victory and one defeat. Quebec edged Hamilton 4-3 in Sunday afternoon's opener.

The Bruins surprised the Remparts when they came out hitting and checking hard in the opening period, controlling the corners.

"We really didn't know what to expect from them," Beck said of the Remparts. "The team we played from here (Sherbrooke Beavers) last year skated, so we knew we had to throw the body on them."

And the Bruins used their superior size to do just that.

But the Remparts appeared to run into difficulty when they abandoned their normally-strong forechecking game.

"They didn't really forecheck us," Beck said. "They let us come out of our own end. Usually we're used to two men coming in at us."

Quebec coach Ron Racette was sure his club could play better than they showed.

"We had a bad start," he said. "We've got a young hockey club and we kept coming on stronger and stronger."

Champions, Every One At Vic High Centenary

It was a case of at least 10,000 revisiting yesterday at Vic High on the weekend, the Centennial Celebrations sweeping the whole town in one form or another. And the hallowed grounds never knew as much nostalgia as was spilled on the grass and in the classrooms on Saturday starting with that "Breakfast with the Champions," which had a reservation list of only 280, whereas over 600 showed up; and ending with the Centennial ball, if not the biggest, certainly the friendliest wing-ding Memorial Arena likely will ever see. Then there was the climax, the Government House garden party on Sunday and that was in the record category for numbers too.

In sports, George "Porky" Andrews, who is the school's physical education director, one of its former heroes and who occupies, along with several others, a place in the B.C. Sports Hall of Fame, drew the biggest cheer at Friday night's pageant, Come Give a Cheer, as many of the past greats were recalled. But then, perhaps he should because, as was pointed out, "he's a legend in his own time." And George was in charge of the athletic show for all the old sweats on Saturday. Sure, the other hall of famers got their dues — the Pedens, Torchy and Doug; the Patricks, Lynn and Muzz; the Chapmans, Chuck and Art, and oh yes, there was one who was almost forgotten. It was Bruce Humber, who did attend Vic High, if only for a short time; and he is that one more hall of famer.

There was something for all who wanted to take part — tennis, and obviously a lot of those people had been practicing; track, a short joggers course led by Gordon Hartley and with an ex-Olympic runner, Cliff Salmond, included in the field; basketball, from all eras, even if the big stars opted out and Bill Garner was caught holding more than once; soccer, field hockey, and volleyball. Some people were even in shape. Ron Castner was a ball of fire on the court, Jim Ireland showed a burst of speed too, Dave Naysmith tripped over the centre line but otherwise escaped uninjured; Alan Jackson, who had open-heart surgery just two years ago, dropped in a howitzer just like his late brother, Busher, used to do; Harold MacLean made the trip from Vancouver to show off; and he admitted he had been working out and maybe that's why he was high scorer, he told brother Sam.

There were some other family groups about. Sid Gaunt brought brother Roy to the party; there were four McKeachies — Alex, Tom, Jimmy and Mary; and it was the last one mentioned who captained a rep basketball team at old Slick High and I didn't know that! There were the Pynns, Gary and Gordie; the Lannigans, Paddy and Jack. Laura Gale Matheson came down from Powell River nd was hoping to see Ray Kersey who was just about the fastest of his time in track; Bill Dale, another of the city's Olympic and Commonwealth athletes, looked as trim as ever; Mary Coutts played basketball for the Vets against the Tigers as did Ann Pugh.

Lucille Sparks Foster was saying she couldn't recall the ball being that heavy and the basket that high; Peter Coste did a double; he played basketball and took the short x-country route across the centre of the track; John Balloch's biggest mistake wasn't on the court, but forgetting the opener and the ice at the post-athletic reception; Rex was another of the Jacksons present and he always was an accomplished tennis player; Pat Yeamans Metcalfe also turned out; Bruce Naylor was as rough as ever; it's too bad the girls at UVic couldn't have seen their coach, Mike Gallo, in action; Larry Booth, the former Shamrock, looked like he could strip for the Irish again today; Darrell Lorimer showed (once) why he was once an all-star; and the Godfrey girls turned it on for the current crop.

So most of it was devotion above and beyond the call of duty, but a champ in this regard has to be Ralph Cosier. Ralph checked in for the soccer match with his vintage mates and doubtless few of the watchers realized that he was playing with an artificial limb. He had part of his leg shot off during the war. The Okell brothers, Jack and Roy, were also there, swapping lies, but Roy did find a mistake under his team picture in the archives. The coach was wrongly listed as W. Roper when it should have read H. Cumberbirch and so the attendant was advised. Then tragedy. For when the same Okell turned out for soccer none of his group turned up to watch the action. Why? Because as one said, "to get a picture of you we would need a slow film," and another added, "and a wide lens." And I'm certain that Oscar Guelpa and Albert Kirkbride would fit in the same category.

Still, it was fun; and me? Why, I was in charge of the weather!

WAYNE STEPHENSON

Wayne Stays in Nets

MONTREAL (CP) — Fred Shero says he plans to go with Wayne Stephenson in goal again tonight as Philadelphia Flyers attempt to even their best-of-seven National Hockey League Stanley Cup final against Montreal Canadiens.

Stephenson, who once starred for Canada's national hockey team, has been a key cog in the Philadelphia team that finished this season with 118 points, nine behind Montreal in the over-all NHL points race. He played well Sunday night despite the fact the Flyers lost 4-3 in the opening game.

Stephenson was acquired from St. Louis Blues prior to last season, and his first year with the Flyers was marked by prolonged periods of inactivity. He played 639 minutes in 12 regular-season games and had two playoff games last spring.

"I expected to play about 25 or 30 games," Stephenson said. "My understanding was that I was there to back up Bernie (Parent) and give him a rest now and then. I thought, well, maybe I'd be playing 25 or 30 games. You know it just never really worked out."

But this season, with Parent injured much of the year, Stephenson played 3,819 minutes and has been in the Flyers' nets since the second game of their five-game semi-final against Boston Bruins after Parent played the first eight Philadelphia playoff games.

Stephenson was still not sure Monday afternoon if he was going to be in the nets tonight although Shero told reporters he was definitely going to stick with the 31-year-old native of Fort William, Ont.

"He played well Sunday night," Shero said. "He played well all year. I have three good goaltenders and I wouldn't hesitate to make a change if he got tired or had a minor injury. He told me he wasn't tired."

Looking ahead to tonight's game, Stephenson commented: "I think we will try to contain them a little more. We'll make a small adjustment in our system.

"Sunday night's game was a case of feeling the other team out, finding out how the series is going to go."

Shero said he may dress a seventh defenceman for tonight's game while Montreal coach Scotty Bowman said he plans no lineup alterations.

Waxahachie Was Deserted

By The Associated Press

Monday night was a big night for manager Paul Richards of Chicago White Sox but Texas Rangers may have gone a little too far for their own good in getting into the spirit of the occasion.

The Rangers, riding the crest of an eight-game victory streak, honored the 67-year-old Richards, a native of nearby Waxahachie, Tex., in pre-game ceremonies, then lost 7-6 to the struggling White Sox in an 11-inning American League baseball game.

"There are 1,075 people in Waxahachie and they were all here tonight," said Richards.

Despite the Chicago win, which was helped by some heroics by centre fielder Ralph Garr, Texas retained its three-game lead in the American League West because Kansas City Royals lost 5-4 to Minnesota Twins.

In Monday's only other American League game, Oakland A's trimmed California Angels 6-3. In the only National League game, Los Angeles Dodgers shaded St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 on a two-run homer in the ninth.

Garr slashed a hit-and-run double that scored Pat Kelly all the way from first base off reliever Steve Foucault with one out in the 11th inning for the winning run.

Garr had ripped a two-run homer in the ninth inning to give Chicago a 6-3 lead, then watched as Texas tied it 6-6 with three runs in its half of the ninth, highlighted by Juan Beniquez's game-tying single.

"It was an exciting game as you would want to see," Richards said. "It was a nice tribute by the Rangers, but once the game starts, it's everybody for himself."

Bellies and the Bug Nirmal's Top Problems

Victoria Shamrocks make their season's debut at Memorial Arena tonight and two factors stand in the way of a third straight victory, according to coach Nirmal Dillon.

One is the 'flu bug that has been plaguing the Rocks. The other is the opposition, the New Westminster Salmonbellies.

Three players who have been suffering from the 'flu and might miss the game are Tom Black, Dan Green and Gordie Neilsen. Ranjit Dillon has also been troubled with the sickness, but will play.

However, two players will be back in action after bouts with the bug. They are Jerry Kustaski and Peter Rushton.

"New Westminster is always tough," said Dillon. "They will have a good team." And judging from their lineup the defending league champions should be as strong, perhaps stronger than last season.

Playing coach is Wayne Goss who won the scoring championship and he has some excellent help from the defunct National Lacrosse League to go with the holdovers.

They are big Al Lewthwaite, who once said he would retire this year; Ken Winzoski, the brothers Brian and Bob Tasker who played at Maryland, and Dave Wilfong, Jim Johnson and Jan Magee of Long Island Tomahawks.

Wilfong was a player sought after by the Shamrocks earlier this year while Johnson was the rookie of the year in the NLL in 1975. Two juniors who have made the jump to senior company are Brian Hazelwood and Jim Curley while Gary McLaughlin is a goalkeeper who was obtained in a trade with Nanaimo Timbermen.

Dillon hadn't decided who would start in goal for the Irish. George Grover was one of the stars of the first Shamrock win over Coquitlam, and Skip Chapman kept the Irish in the game for the first period against Burrards until they got untracked. So Dillon is unworried and "that is the least of my problems."

Shamrocks will honor championship teams from the city at tonight's game — Victoria Scorpions, western Canada basketball champions; Victoria Bate, World softball champions; JBAA B.C. rugby champions, and Home Lumber, Canadian women's basketball titleholders.

Game time is 8 p.m.

Who's Staying Home?

PARIS (AP) — The sports service of the French television network was wondering Monday why it had decided to televise the European Soccer Cup final at Glasgows' Hampden Park on Wednesday.

Reports indicate there won't be many French football fans in France when A. S. Saint Etienne meets defending champion Bayern Munich for the 1976 European Football Cup.

Thirty charter aircraft from all corners of France will converge on Glasgow with their full loads of passengers. Others including mayors and government ministers will travel to Scotland by cars, buses and even bicycles — many of them without entry tickets to 135,000 capacity Hampden Park.

Twenty thousand tickets have already been sold in France. Those without hotel bookings hope to "camp" in a field or park.

Politics, the threat of drought and the passing of the capital gains tax bill which filled French newspapers and radio-TV programs last week have evaporated in the heat-wave of soccer chauvanism which has now reached fever pitch. Despite the lack of rain everything is lush green since the emerald shirts of this club from central France eliminated PSV Eindhoven in the semi-finals.

This will be the first time in a score of years that a French club has reached a Eurbpean Cup final.

Bayern is at Turnberry, Ayrshire, and will use the stadium of Ayr United. A tight security ring was thrown around the hotel — not so much for Bayern as to protect the Rolling Stones, who are also staying there. The pop group's fans were swarming in thousands.

Glasgow, a notoriously hard-drinking city, expects to have its biggest-ever night of drinking after the game. In an unprecedented move, city authorities ruled that bars and restaurants may stay open until 3 a.m., normally they have to close at 10 p.m.

More than 1,000 bars and restaurants applied for special permits. Thousands of Scots, with no chance of seeing the game, are expected to converge on Glasgow, just for the drinking.

Angry Scottish fans besieged the offices of the Scottish Football Association trying to get tickets. This followed a story in the Glasgow Sunday Mail that 4,000 tickets had been reserved for SFA officials and their friends.

The report said the 4,000 tickets had come mostly from St. Etienne fans, who returned them because they could not get transportation.

Coach Isn't Counting

Victoria McDonalds go for three straight in Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League action at the Esquimalt Sports Centre tonight and over-confidence may be the biggest problem faced by team coach Bill Monroe.

McDonalds defeated the 1975 champion Burnaby Cablevision in their first home game and on Saturday took the measure of Richmond Roadrunners, 21-8 at Richmond. Meanwhile, Burnaby rebounded by walloping Coquitlam J-Hawks 19-9.

And since the Bakers are hosting the J-Hawks tonight, it would appear they should have an excellent chance of getting that third win.

But Monroe isn't counting the two points yet. Junior lacrosse is often unpredictable and, after all, Coquitlam did win its first game by running up 21 goals against New Westminster.

Game time is 8 p.m.

Players, NHL Sign Long Pact

Times News Services

The longest collective bargaining agreement between a sports organization and its players has been officially signed by representatives of both the National Hockey League and the NHL Players' Association, it was announced Monday at Montreal.

The five-year agreement covers the period from Sept. 5, 1975, through Sept. 14, 1980, and was originally announced last Oct 6.

One highlight is the recognition by the players that the owners have the right to equalization or compensation from another NHL team that acquires the services of a player who has played out his option.

Another point is that a team and player may negotiate a no-option contract in which case the player, at the end of the fixed term of the contract, is unconditionaly released and as a free agent may negotiate with any other NHL team.

Dale Sees Improvement By Par-Breaking Girls

Result-wise, Cec Ferguson emerged with the advantage over Dale Shaw. But from a standpoint of enjoyment, the weekend might be considered a draw for Vancouver Island's two best amateurs.

Fergie, who is on hand to accept "happy 26th birthday" wishes today, couldn't be anything but happy Sunday when he won the Vancouver Island Open by defeating Gorge Vale clubmate Grant Milliken.

Dale, playing in the Women's International at Hilton Head Island, S.C., didn't let a disappointing finish detract from the thrill of playing in the inaugural equivalent of the men's Augusta Masters.

Dale had rounds of 79, 72, 77 and 81 to finish 21 strokes over par. Sally Little, the new glamor girl on the professional tour, won with a seven-under-par 281.

One of two Canadians invited (professional Sandra Post was the other), Dale "thoroughly enjoyed" competing with professionals. It has been four years since she competed with pros, and Dale is visibly impressed.

"The calibre of girls' golf is so much better," she said Monday. "The course is extremely difficult yet a lot of the girls were under par. You have to be impressed."

About her own game, Dale said she putted well but was hurt by her driver. "It's a very tight course, with no room for recovery if you make a mistake."

She ran into a few problems off the tee, but otherwise felt she "played fairly well."

Ferguson's victory over Milliken turned out to be something of a routine match. Once Ferguson took the lead, his steadiness didn't leave much room for a comeback charge by the defending champion.

The main reason for the lack of excitement may have been the putting of the finalists. Both were steady, but not spectacular. Neither was able to crank in long putts or any of consequence.

One thing that did bother some of the walking gallery at Gorge Vale were the seven motorized carts that were allowed to follow the match. Sunday's drivers were well-mannered and they didn't bother Ferguson or Milliken. In fact, it is to their credit that they behaved better than some of the RCGA officials who go-karted around the course during the Canadian junior tournament at the Gorge last summer.

Carts on a course during competition are an annoyance.

Volleyball Tourney Draws Stars

More than 200 athletes representing 12 men's and 12 women's teams will be in town Friday and Saturday for the Canadian junior volleyball championships at Mt. Douglas High School and the University of Victoria's McKinnon Building.

Opening ceremonies will be at 9 a.m. Friday in the McKinnon Building. The finals are set for 7 p.m. (women's) and 8:30 p.m. (men's) on Saturday on the same boards.

Both men's and women's competitions will be divided into two six-team pools for preliminary round-robin play. The first two teams in each pool will then advance to the championship semi-finals.

Victoria "Y" is the host team in both tournaments.

Other teams vying for the national men's crown are defending-champion Onion Patch of Ottawa; Manitoba Bandits, who boast five players from the 1973 championship team; Guelph Oaks, led by six-foot-four Seymour Hadwen (national junior team captain) to a 58-0 Ontario Junior League record this season; Hochelaga of Montreal; Sunbury Blues of Oromocto, N.B., boasting two national junior team members; Westbrooke Nova Blues of Nova Scotia; Phoenix of Edmonton; B.C. Olympics, provincial champions led by national junior team members John Markwart and Walter Neufeld; Yorktown of Saskatchewan; Springfield Sabres of Manitoba and Scarboro Kings of Ontario.

Vancouver Chimos are defending the women's title. Other teams are University of Calgary Dinnies; Lumsden Lionettes, winners of the Saskatchewan title seven of the last eight years; University of Manitoba Bisonettes, who boast four national junior team members and two six-footers; Winnipeg Juniors, who have one national junior player; London Junos, who have a 116-19 record this season under the leadership of six-foot-four Cindy Elliott; Scarborough Saints, who have a core of players from an unbeaten juvenile squad; Merivale of Ottawa, who have one national junior player; Montreal International; Fredericton Juniors, who have dominated Atlantic competition this season and Annapolis-Royal Legionettes, a dark-horse entry.

Victoria "Y" has an excellent chance at the women's title.

The girls' team finished third in the provincial tournament behind Chimos and B.C. Olympics despite missing the services of Linda Chiu. Shelley Godfrey, another leading player, was competing for the first time since suffering a leg injury two months ago. Misses Chiu and Godfrey were members of the B.C. team which captured the gold medal at the 1975 Canada Summer Games and sparked Victoria High to the provincial title last year.

Ron Greene, general chairman of the national tourney, coaches the team and is assisted by Dave Turkington, physical-education director for the Greater Victoria School Board, and Boeing Quan, a third-year phys-ed student at UVic.

Luke Stern, a coach for many years in Newfoundland, is at the helm of the Victoria "Y" boys' team, which is composed mainly of players from the Victoria High squad that finished second in the B.C. tourney.

Rick Crosby, Fred Dobbs, Dean Jordan, Tom Kover, Roger Racine, MacWebb and Dean Yole are from Vic High, while Andy Adams of Camosun College, Dave Carey of UVic, Dave Shokar of Colquitz and Sarjeet Sall of Duncan round out the squad.

Delesalle Qualifies

Although the Canadian men's gymnastics team didn't qualify for the Olympics in Montreal at the weekend competition in Wiesbaden, West Germany, four members of the team qualified individually and they included Philip Delesalle of Victoria.

The others who made the Olympic standard were Keith Carter of Winnipeg, Pierre Leclerc of Montreal and Masaaki Naosake of Toronto. Naosaki may be prevented from representing Canada as he was born in Japan and is awaiting his citizenship application to be processed.

Only three of the four will be allowed in the Olympic competition.

Delesalle averaged more than nine points in his showing at Wiesbaden and coach John Herb of the Victoria Sports School says he thinks Delesalle can finish in the top six in the side horse and the top ten in the high bar with that showing at Montreal.

All will be competing at the Canadian gymnastics championship to be held at the University of Victoria, July 1-3. Naosaki was the over-all winner last year. Delesalle, 17, was second.

Strict Dog Law Rejected

Ald. Doug McLelland tried — and failed — to marshall support on Oak Bay council Monday night for tougher laws on loose dogs and dogs which foul property other than their owner's.

Responding to a letter from S. R. Toller, 947 Pattullo Place, requesting action, McLelland said dogs should either be contained on the owner's property or on a leash.

And if dogs, out on a leash, foul public or other private property, then the owner should be responsible for cleaning up the mess.

He said it is "socially ill-mannered" for owners to allow their dogs to run at large but it is "socially obnoxious" to have the dogs defecating in the neighborhood.

How do you identify the owner of a defecating dog, he asked.

"You look at the person staring fixedly at the sky. That's the owner."

He said a committee of Edmonton council has recommended dogs be banned in parks and not allowed off their owner's property except on a leash. And if a dog defecates outside its owner's property then the owner would be required to clean it up immediately.

"Many, many people are concerned about loose dogs and dog droppings," he said, adding that it is "up to council to set the pace."

He proposed that municipal staff draw up a report on either strengthening the animals bylaw or creating a new one to cope wth the problems he outlined.

But no one on council would second his motion and it died.

Council then voted to receive and file Toller's letter, which called for council to follow some other cities and force dog owners to clean up the mess left by their pets.

Apartment Site Proposed

A second condominium apartment is being proposed for Newport Avenue overlooking Windsor Park in Oak Bay.

Wheaton Construction Limited, in a letter to council formally received Monday night, said "the optimum utilization of the property would seem to be a purely residential development of five storeys with four units on each floor, and all of the parking located in an underground garage area."

The property is at 1175 Newport and now contains a grocery and a television repair and service shop.

Wheaton described the existing structures as "old and obsolete and would not lend themselves to any practical program of rehabilitation. A new development is therefore the only alternative to leaving them in their present state."

Council has already entered into a land-use contract for a similar condominium apartment on the vacant corner of Newport and Windsor.

Present zoning is for three storeys, retail or commercial development with offices or apartments above and underground parking, engineer-planner Geoff White told council.

Mayor Brian Smith expressed concern that small retail shops are being replaced by larger buildings so that residents end up with no shops and only condominiums in their place.

Wheaton, in a written submission to council, said development under present zoning would not be economically feasible.

But adding commercial space to a condominium "is highly questionable since the general opinion seems to be that rental rates would not be high enough to support the cost of such space as would be available on the ground floor of a building of this quality."

"Most business or retail outlets that could pay the rents required would probably want to be located on the (Oak Bay) Avenue in the village shopping area."

Wheaton said the proposal would see the building set back 45 to 50 feet from Newport. Site coverage by the building would be about 35 per cent, approximately the same as the condominium proposed for the corner.

Any of the windows on the south side of the next door project would be able to see past the front corner of the proposal. The "monotonous regularity of a row of buildings" would be avoided because one would be much farther back on the lot.

Condominium Changes Defeated

A move to validate changes to a condominium at 1147 St. David, made after a land-use contract was entered into between Oak Bay council and developer P. L. Margetts, was defeated at council Monday night.

The motion followed defeat of another which sought to simply receive and file a letter from Margetts in which he enclosed a petition showing neighbors approve the additions of carports and storage sheds not provided for in the original contract.

Four members of council voted to defeat the motion to receive and file and two voted in favor of validating the changes to the land-use contract, causing Mayor Brian Smith to tell Margetts that he was short of the necessary five votes.

Ald. John Goult said he didn't want developers to get the idea that they could do what they want anyway and then present council with a fait accompli because then a land-use contract would lose all meaning.

Margetts denied going ahead with the carports and storage sheds simply hoping that council would approve the contract later.

He admitted the original plans didn't contain the carports and storage sheds, but said he went out of town and when he returned the work was all but finished.

It was done to better the project, and the neighbors think so," he said.

Council earlier voted to demolish the additions.

Oak Bay Ratepayers Face Average $112 Hike

Oak Bay council approved a 1976 budget Monday night which will mean an average increase of $112 for homeowners.

The total mill rate this year will be 117.993 compared with 99.268 last year.

Of this tax rate, the levy for the Greater Victoria School District — over which council has no control — is up 11.39 mills.

The general municipal rate was up 3.54 mills to 49 and the debt rate was up 3.59 mills to 11.02.

More than half the mill rate increase for debt purposes was accounted for by repayments for the Recreation Centre.

The general municipal mill rate rose 7.79 per cent, reflecting an increase in expenditures of 7.12 per cent due to a slight decrease in the value of one mill, while school costs at 52.75 mills show an increase of 27.54 per cent.

The net tax increase to a median value home ($7,740 taxable value) will be $112 for those under 65 and $63 for qualified persons over 65.

The actual general municipal levy reflects expenditures of $2,886,790 this year compared with $2,694,979 last year.

Mayor Brian Smith said the municipal portion of the budget is "a very, very conservative increase."

Nine Miners Killed

YAMAGATA, Japan (AP) — Nine miners were killed today in a gas explosion in a tunnel construction site near Yamagata, northeast of Tokyo, police reported.

Que. Separatism Dead: Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Separatism in Quebec is dead, Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday.

At a luncheon meeting of influential lobbyists from Japan, Western Europe and North America — the Trilateral Commission — he said the Parti Quebecois no longer campaigns on a platform of separatism.

Instead, it now says it will hold a referendum on separatism if Quebecers first elect the party to office.

"To me, this is the end of separatism in Quebec," Trudeau said.

He also described the French-Canadian independence movement as the "evil fruit of the unbalanced treatment" of a minority in the country.

The prime minister said he felt that a new understanding of French-Canadian nationalism by English-Canadian opinion leaders would eventually undermine the force of nationalism.

The fact that the separatist party in Quebec — the Parti Quebecois — now seeks power first, and a referendum on separatism later, was an "extremely significant" policy shift, he said.

Trudeau also assured a questioner from the U.S. that he is not an economic nationalist.

CANADA BOOSTING QUAKE-AREA AID

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave unanimous support Monday to a motion calling on the government to consider more help for victims of the earthquake in northern Italy.

The motion expressed deep concern for the families of the survivors and asked the government to consider more financial help as well as more assistance from the NATO contingent stationed in Europe.

The motion was sponsored by Italian-born Charles Caccia (L—Davenport) and seconded by Monique Begin, a Liberal who represents the Montreal riding of St. Michel which has a big Italian population.

The defence department earlier announced that 200 troops were sent to the stricken area from the Canadian NATO base in Lahr, West Germany.

The Canadians included six doctors, a large number of medical assistants and water purification specialists.

400 Employees Occupy Plant Near Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — About 400 employees of the provincially-owned Sidbec steel company occupied the firm's suburban LaSalle plant Monday after company officials declared a lockout during the weekend.

A security guard said the 400 workers entered the factory after breaking a padlock on the front gates. About 700 employees had turned up for the 6:30 a.m. shift, but many left because they feared trouble, the guard said.

"We let them come in because they were well disciplined," he added. "They have instructions from their union president not to do any damage."

He said five or six police cars drove up, but left after seeing that the situation was under control.

A lockout of about 1,000 factory and office workers was called last Thursday at the company's Contrecoeur plant, 40 miles northeast of Montreal. Employees at both plants are members of two union locals affiliated with the United Steel Workers of America.

A Sidbec spokesman said the workers were locked out after engaging in harassment tactics, production interruptions and work slowdowns since May 1, when the workers gained the legal right to strike.

Chief union negotiator Marcel Bureau last week threatened a strike by all 3,000 unionized Sidbec employees if negotiations continued "at a snail's pace."

Negotiations between the company and the employees began in January.

BOOK FIRM CARRIES ON

OTTAWA (FP) — Simon and Schuster Canada Ltd., the second largest paperback book company in Canada, says it will carry on with "business as usual," at least until legal matters become clarified, despite last week's precedent-setting federal government decision in effect requiring the company to sever its ties with its long-time U.S. parent, Simon and Schuster Inc. of New York.

French Can Be Used, Lang Says

OTTAWA (CP) — A directive issued by Air Canada to flight crews does not mean that the French language cannot be used during visual flight operations at five Quebec airports where bilingual communications now are being used, Transport Minister Otto Lang said Monday.

Nor was the directive intended to order French-speaking pilots to stop using their language during casual conversations while on the job, Lang told the Commons.

Later, the minister said the directive applied to instrument flight operations which require communication of a technical nature, but not to visual flight operations because they do not require technical talk.

Dief Rakes Raid on Toronto Sun

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Both Solicitor General Warren Allmand and Justice Minister Ron Basford Monday denied having anything to do with last week's raid on a Toronto newspaper which former Conservative prime minister John Diefenbaker called an infringement of freedom of the press.

Diefenbaker provoked a heated exchange in the Commons when he cross examined the two about their role in the Friday raid on the Toronto Sun by members of the force seeking the original copy of a confidential government letter regarding the security screening of civil servants.

Government House leader Mitchell Sharp denounced Diefenbaker for accusing Prime Minister Trudeau of lying about his knowledge of the affair.

He dared the former Tory prime minister to repeat his accusation to Trudeau's face.

Allmand told New Democratic leader Ed Broadbent that the warrant to search the newspaper offices was issued by a justice of the peace on application by the RCMP "under the Official Secrets Act and fully in accordance with the law."

The RCMP made the raid after the newspaper carried excerpts of a letter written by Canada's security chief, Gen. Michael Dare.

"No political persons" were involved in the decision and he learned about it only on Sunday, Allmand added.

"Under the law I was not involved in the decision," he said.

Basford said he doesn't have the name of the justice of the peace who issued the warrant.

"It is clear under the Official Secrets Act that no such warrant was issued by me nor do I have such authority to isssue," the justice minister stated.

Diefenbaker charged that the issuing of the warrants "actually constitute, on the face of it, infringement of freedom of the press."

Illegal Jail Term Sparks Change in Court System

Two changes have been adopted by the Victoria prosecutor's office following a recent habeas corpus application in B.C. Supreme Court in which a man was found to have been illegally held in jail for two months.

Prosecutor Nicholas Lang said Monday that the Crown counsel's office in Vancouver has been instructed to communicate the results of all Victoria cases before the Court of Appeal to the Victoria office.

In addition, the prosecutor's office now will bring forward people for bail hearings even if they are in custody on a matter other than the subject of the bail hearing.

"It is a perfect example of why the Court of Appeal should sit in Victoria again," said Lang.

"The appeal would then have been heard here and we'd have known what the result was."

The Court of Appeal, which used to sit in Victoria for local cases, was shifted to Vancouver last summer while other superior courts were moved to temporary accommodation at the former St. Anne's Academy pending construction of two new floors on the Law Courts Building on Burdett Street.

The man who was the subject of the successful habeas corpus application was ordered released from custody pending his trial in county court this fall.

Lang said the man was already serving an 18-month sentence and was due for release, with earned statutory remission, in February. But he was convicted just before that of escaping lawful custody.

That conviction meant he lost his remission time and would remain in custody until the middle of this year. But the conviction was reversed by the Court of Appeal in Vancouver in late February.

But Lang said neither the prosecutor's office in Victoria nor Wilkinson Road jail were informed of the reversal of conviction so the man remained in jail.

The reversal by the Court of Appeal also meant the remission time on the earlier offence dictated his release in February.

As a result, said Lang, the man was being held in Wilkinson Road jail illegally from late February to late April.

Because of the background, the man's identity and the charge against him for which he will stand trial later this year are not being published.

Sex Stats Called Shocking

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A study into sex crimes in Saanich is giving a chilling insight into the frequency, type and pattern of offences committed in the municipality.

The study is being conducted by University of Victoria professor of clinical psychology, Dr. Pam Duncan.

Dr. Duncan and her research assistant, Maxine Stovel, said in an interview they were shocked by the number of cases, particularly the number involving hitchhikers as victims.

Their study began last summer with a review of every sex offence — from obscene telephone call to rape-murder — reported to Saanich police since 1970. The study, which is analysing the characteristics of each act, the offenders and victims, is expected to be completed by the end of this summer.

Dr. Duncan said the list of offences and offenders fills both sides of 12 foolscap sheets of paper, single-spaced.

So far they have examined 92 case histories, 12 of whom victimized a total of 25 hitchhikers over a two-year period.

Dr. Duncan said the study will determine patterns of criminal sexual behavior.

Saanich was selected as a pilot project but eventually she hopes to extend the study to include all of lower Vancouver Island and the Vancouver region, provided she can get funds through the federal government.

Ultimately the information will be fed into a computer and aid police in catching offenders.

She said the RCMP has expressed interest in the project for posssible implementation on a Canada-wide basis.

Duncan said psychologists have long realized sex offenders tend to stick to set patterns but the problem has been in knowing which patterns are prevalent in any given area.

Although it is too early to form definite conclusions, certain patterns are emerging in Saanich.

For instance the research is showing sex offences seem to peak in December-January and May. Of the 25 hitch-hiker cases, four occurred during May and six during Christmas, with the rest scattered through the year, one or two a month, except April when there were none reported.

The study is revealing child molesters appear to be most attracted to girls in the age range of five to seven who are blond, dressed in bright red, and wear short skirts. Also in many cases the offender is known to the child's family as a neighbor, boarder of even babysitter.

Duncan said the findings indicate girls eight to 11 are not as attractive to the offender, but boys age 10 and up are, and that most frequently advances are made on boys as they move into organized sport.

The study is showing as many offenders are married as single. Duncan noted one strange common thread — that a high number of offenders wear matching clothing. If he's got on green pants, his shirt's green too, she declared. In addition many offenders have reported being molested as children themselves. (Duncan cautioned such confessions are not "highly verifiable.")

Offenders in the older age group — 60 and over — pose a special problem, Duncan said, because many don't believe they've done anything wrong. They might admit to a sexual act but not a sexual offence. It's tantamount to a total non-acceptance of society's morals or mores, she said.

Patterns also appear to be distinct for the offender who picks up hitch-hikers. Duncan said one man in the study always went to the same location, a bus stop, to select his victims. Another man would only pick up girls who wouldn't make good witnesses, specializing in hippie-types wearing back-packs.

Almost all of the victims are between 12 and 21, she said, and of the 25 studied, four were boys.

Duncan said there is as much danger in picking up hitch-hikers as there is in being picked up. She cited two recent cases of Saanich women raped by hitch-hiking males.

The actual incidence of sexual assault on hitch-hikers isn't known but Duncan estimated it could run as high as 125 a year in Saanich alone on the basis that only about one incident in 10 is ever reported to police.

Duncan said those who think they are safe if they hitch-hike with a friend are dead wrong.

"When a girl hitch-hikes alone and is threatened, she has the choice of resisting or complying.

"But with a friend the choice diminishes tremendously because if the offender threatens one person, the other inevitably complies.

"It is interesting that she may be prepared to endanger her own life, but not that of a friend."

TOWN TALK

Trying to find a bank that's open on Saturday has its frustrations, but one American visitor to Victoria fared pretty well last week.

An employee of the Century Inn on Government Street phoned Town Talk to tell of one of the inn's guests who was unaware that Canadian banks, unlike those in the U.S., are not normally open on Saturday.

The American tourist wandered off down Government Street trying doors on the banks along the way until he found one that was open — the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Trouble was, he was the only person in the bank. Oops!

Police were called to remedy the situation and although the tourist didn't get the money he was looking for, he did get a funny story to carry home to his friends down south.

The bank staff was, to say the least, reluctant to discuss the situation.

McKENZIE
. . . a few suggestions

In case Ald. Ron McKenzie is running out of ideas for raising more revenue to offset the cost of running the city's parks system, Town Talk offers the following possibilities.

How about charging the youngsters a dime a head to enter the Beacon Hill Park animal enclosure, and a nickel each to have fun on the slides and swings?

Would it be feasible to fence off the Dallas Road cliff path and charge the strollers and joggers admission?

Maybe the parks department could get stale bread from one of the local bakers, package bread crumbs and sell them to people who'd like to feed the ducks.

Then again, do we really need all those costly roses, tulips and so on? Beds of plastic flowers would look fairly realistic, and they'd last for ever with no maintenance.

INFORMATION CENTRAL — That's the new name for the green-carpeted inner sanctum of Premier Bill Bennett's office. In recent months a new policy has come down that all ministers must have their press releases approved by his office.

Bennett is obviously trying to centralize control in his office and hopes to prevent his ministers from embarrassing slip-ups.

But there's been no noticeable improvement in the quality of press releases, the only obvious effect being long delays for anxious press members trying to get the news out.

The policy hasn't prevented Bennett's ministers from embarrassing slip-ups in verbal encounters with the press and we are wondering if the premier will soon try to take control of his ministers' mouths as well as their pens.

Sour grapes — from a former Vic High student who told Town Talk he was avoiding the whole 100th anniversary bash.

"They expelled me three times — once for using a walkie talkie in class, another time for forging my dad's signature on my report card and again for trying to run down the principal."

Our disgruntled friend, now a local businessman, said in the latter case he had only meant to splash the principal Vic Thompson "but I skidded." He was driving a car at the time — not a bike.

Mrs. R. A. Harrison, of Saanichton, is pleased to pass along a ray of sunshine in a troubled world:

Her husband hired a reserve Indian to till the garden, for which he charged $11.50, and when Harrison said that didn't seem enough, the Indian insisted that was his price.

Harrison gave more, to which the Indian said he would add the money to his "hungry children fund."

"Here's a man who we think of as being about as low as you can get on the ladder, and he's thinking of less fortunate people," Mrs. Harrison said. "He realizes they're not so bad off after all, and that's beautiful in a world where everyone is taking and not giving."

The Indian said he had been putting money aside this way for nearly 30 years and brought up his family to do the same.

Some Taxed Less!

Sidney council approved a property tax increase of about five per cent Monday night — but some ratepayers will end up paying less taxes this year than last.

Mayor Peter Malcolm said the municipal mill rate rises by 2.3 mills and the increase for the school district is about 1.5 mills, bringing the mill rate increase close to 4.

"I think everyone can live with it," he said.

In some cases the tax bill will actually be smaller. Municipal clerk Geoffrey Logan said he calculated one probably typical example, a three-bedroom house on a standard lot with a market value likely close to $60,000, and found this year's tax bill down $11 from last year's.

The reason is found in provincial grants, not municipal tax rates. Last year the school tax removal grant was on a sliding scale while this year it had been combined with the home owner grant and set at a flat $280. For some people, that will mean a net tax decrease this year.

Notice of tax bills will go out for the 2,500 properties on Sidney's tax roll about the end of this month and taxes are due by the end of June.

Operating budget for the town this year is $2.2 million.

Sidney and North Saanich councils both gave figst reading Monday night to bylaws establishing a joint recreation commission, replacing the tri-municipal commission formerly operated with Central Saanich.

2-1 IN CHAMBER'S POLL

Business Backs Centre

Victoria Chamber of Commerce members have voted roughly two-to-one in favor of a proposal to increase the city's business tax from five to six per cent, to provide a start-up fund for the construction of a convention centre.

But there was no indication today whether the chamber itself would press for the policy to be adopted, or whether city council is impressed by the results of the survey.

Mayor Mike Young was non-committal, saying only that the result was "no great surprise" to him.

Of the 940 ballots issued to members, 330 had been returned by today. Of these 210 were in favor of the tax hike proposal, and 120 opposed.

Chamber president Jack Hutchins termed the 35 per cent return "pretty excellent" but declined comment until after the executive committee has considered the final tabulation at its meeting Wednesday.

"We haven't made any decision yet based on the survey," he said.

Mayor Young said the result seems to indicate that the city's retail community generally supports the idea of a civic convention centre, but he repeated his earlier doubts that the hotel and restaurant trades are also in favor.

(Because the ballot was secret, no breakdown of views according to particular segments of the business community is available.)

The mayor said he knows that at least two local professional groups — the medical and bar associations — oppose the imposition of a business tax increase to finance a convention centre, "and I imagine this would be true of other professional groups as well."

He stressed that the "only major direct beneficiaries" of such a centre would be the city's retail businesses, and said city council would act on its assessment of the "broad spectrum viewpoint."

Meanwhile Eric Charman, immediate past president of the Victoria Real Estate Board, who had urged businessmen to vote against the tax increase proposal, said the ballot results indicate a definite lack of interest in what was claimed to be "a great, burning issue."

Charman reiterated his earlier stand that the ballot lacked adequate controls, and allowed businessmen who don't pay the tax to vote.

Instead of a publicly-financed centre, he favors a proposal that Canadian Pacific greatly expand the present convention facilities at the Empress.

Along with the business tax proposal, chamber members voted to elect nine new directors from a list of 13 candidates.

'Y' One-Third Home

The first report was delivered Monday night on the Victoria YM-YWCA's expansion campaign and it shows one-third of the target of $1,017,000 has been reached.

Campaign manager Charles Frazier said today the canvass of major business firms and senior executives has produced $218,000, one-third of its goal, while $102,300 has been pledged by smaller firms and their executives, 51 per cent of that quota.

Among the five-person teams canvassing the public, each with an objective of $2,500, one team headed by Eric Bonham has already surpassed its goal.

Two individuals, Peter Atkin and teams chairman Ian Rendle, have already tripled their personal objective of $500 each.

The three-week campaign among the public ends June 1.

Over-all objective of the "second step" drive is for $1,350,000 but of this, $333,000 is being sought from the provincial government.

Legal Aid on Wheels Launched by Students

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Two Victoria law students are launching a mobile legal clinic and set off this week by van for a three-and-half month circuit through small northern towns like Chetwynd, Fort St. John, Fort Nelson and Hope.

The University of Victoria law students, Bill Ehrcke and Jamie Dunn, both going into their second-year law, have obtained a $12,000 grant from the Legal Service Commission and the provincial department of labor's summer student hiring program to take law to the people.

UVic law professor Neil Gold said the idea for a mobile legal clinic originated with a lawyer in the Peace River area who was anxious to provide legal service to northern residents hindered by geographical location and lack of funds.

The two law students will roll out of Victoria Wednesday or Thursday for Dawson Creek and other small centres.

A publicity drive will be launched in the north to give advance information to residents.

Liaison has already been arranged with members of the bar, the police and the human resources department, but the students will still have to do a lot of leg work at stops along the way, said Gold.

Ehrcke and Dunn will live in the 21-foot rented van which is equipped with a radio phone and Gold will fly to locations from Victoria once every two weeks to oversee the project.

The clinic will aim to be in the smaller centres on a regular basis, for example, the day court sits in Fort St. John.

"They hope to help people identify a problem, find out whether it needs long range planning or not, give summary advice and act as a referral agency to lawyers stationed in the North" said Gold.

Lawyers feel there is a real need for the service, said Gold. There are 14 lawyers in Dawson Creek, 14 in Fort St. John and one in Fort Nelson. Smaller centres like Chetwynd, and Mackenzie are without local legal service.

For the most part the van service will just fill in where there is lack of service, although the more complicated legal questions will still be left to fully trained lawyers.

"They just want to help a legal solution along. If it means conveying a client from Chetwynd to Dawson Creek for legal advice or a court appearance, they'll do it," says Gold.

"Geographical distance seems to be a barrier to legal service . . . lawyers, traditionally, don't go out on wheels."

AIMING FOR TASTE of the practical side of the law, six law students from UVic and UBC were inducted into the Victoria police force Monday as summertime probationary constables and got a warm welcome from Insp. Lyle Somers. The students are, seated: Pat Torrison, Dennis Carson, and David Cowan, all of Victoria; standing: Dev Dley of Lake Cowichan, Eric Partridge and Soren Hammerberg, both of Victoria. Carson and Cowan attend UBC, the others UVic. (Bill Halkett photo)

Meeting May 19 On Academy

A public meeting will be held May 19 to debate the future of the Victoria Riding Academy, which is threatened with closure if it cannot pay $7,000 taxes due in June.

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. at Uplands elementary school on Henderson.

Cam Spratt, who is heading a committee formed to try and save the academy, said a letter was mailed to Mayor Brian Smith on Monday, asking council to attend.

"We want to get as many out as possible, whether they're pro or con," Spratt said. "All the children at the academy are taking notices around and we're hoping for a good turnout."

Spratt said a member of his committee took a count at the academy on Saturday and reported 300 people visited the Cedar Hill Cross Road recreation facility, either to ride, admire the horses or look around.

DEAR ABBY: That Montana husband probably wears a gold earring in his left ear for the same reason I have a gold tooth in front with a ruby in it. I like it!—AN INDIVIDUAL

DEAR INDIVIDUAL: I'm with you. A person's right to be himself is one of our cherished freedoms, so why should a person have to "explain" his reasons for it? It's HIS ear and HIS business, and as far as I know, wearing an earring is neither immoral nor illegal. But there seems to be a variety of opinions. Read on.

DEAR ABBY: A Montana wife asked you why her husband suddenly started to wear a tiny gold earring in his left ear. (She asked him and he refused to tell her.) You said you didn't know but if she ever found out, to let you know.

I'm surprised that you didn't know, Abby. It means that he has become a member of the gay community. — HEP IN OAKLAND

DEAR ABBY: I'm a man who had his ears pierced four years ago, and you wouldn't believe the static I've had from people because of one little speck of gold the size of a pinhead!

I've been accused of being a homosexual, a latent transvestite and just plain weird. I assure you I am as average as most men.

I attend college and see more and more macho guys wearing earrings on campus. I don't know if there is any significance to wearing only one earring in the left ear. I wear mine there because I am right-handed, and it's easier to put on. My buddy wears one in his right ear, because it's not seen by the police if he's stopped for a traffic violation. Sign me — PIERCED AND PROUD

DEAR ABBY: A sailor who has sailed three years on the coast of China wears a gold ring in his left ear to prove that he has been there. — RETIRED CAPTAIN—AGE 80

DEAR ABBY: Men have worn earrings for centuries — Shakespeare, Rembrandt and King James II, to name a few of the more promient of them.

Ancient Romans and Greeks borrowed the custom from the Persian and Indian men. And our own American Indian braves also wore earrings. And how about the early African warriors? And the pirates?

Men wore earrings long before women did, so why all the ruckus? — LIVE AND LET LIVE

DEAR ABBY: I am a man who wears a little gold earring in my left ear because of my religion.

I am a Buddist and all Buddists wear one gold earring — and always in the left ear.

I am surprised you didn't know that, Abby. — A BUDDIST

DEAR BUDDHIST: And if you are really a Buddhist, I am surprised that you don't know how to spell "Buddhist."

DEAR ABBY: According to an ancient Chinese belief, the wearing of an earring in the left ear symbolizes that that person's life has been endangered, and to prevent a recurrence, an earring is worn. It is supposedly protection against bad luck. — AUDREY IN SINGAPORE

Debt Defeated, by Education

family

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor
(Last of three)

Credit is the easy way to get what you want when you want it — but it can also be an accelerating juggernaut. Times Business Editor Al Forrest takes a look a how the problems start, how they can be avoided, and where a person sinking under debts can turn for help in this three part series.

Debt can be prevented with proper education, according to provincial government debtor assistance counsellors Frank Steggles and Ed Sibbald.

"There should be an extensive course in the schools, probably around the junior high level," Steggles said.

"Young people should be warned of the dangers of borrowing and they should learn to shop around for credit the way they shop for clothes."

Sibbald adds: "Young people, and older people too, should ask themselves if they really need the item they are buying on credit. Maybe the purchase can wait until they have enough cash."

Both of them are concerned about the escalation of credit buying in society and fear it will result in an even heavier caseload at the debtors assistance division, 838 Fort Street.

The department has put together teacher's kits on the topic of consumer spending but the counsellors feel much more needs to be done.

"We know the young people would be receptive to courses on consumer spending," Steggles said.

"Any time I have been in the school I have found the young people very interested in the topic. They would much rather learn about credit buying than be lectured to on drugs or sex."

Reaching older consumers is a little more difficult, Steggles said.

"Most people seem to prefer to buy a washing machine or refrigerator on credit rather than get one for cash at an auction at one-third the price. Everyone wants new appliances and it looks so easy when it's on credit."

Besides education, new credit procedures are needed, according to the two debt counsellors.

They are amazed that a man who is already in debt $5,000 or $6,000 can float an additional loan someplace else. And it's not only the finance companies. Sometimes two or three banks have loaned money to a man hopelessly in debt.

The problem is a lack of full disclosure.

"A man is very eager to get the loan so he doesn't tell the full story," Sibbald said.

"Often the lending company is just as eager to make the loan and they don't check very carefully. Sometimes one is to blame, sometimes the other — or both."

But fixing blame is not as helpful as finding a solution, they say.

They are urging that the Better Business Bureau or some other agency provide a mandatory list of all debts in a central clearing house.

It should be possible, they say, for a bank, credit union or finance company to poke a few buttons on a computer and find out the true financial status of the person seeking the loan.

"A system like this would go a long way to helping people keep out of financial trouble," Steggles said.

Many people find that debt sort of sneaks up on them as a result of buying too many things too soon. Others walk in with their eyes open, deciding to take a chance that they can get out again.

Whatever the cause, there is help available through the provincial government's debtor assistance program. After counselling at the office at 838 Fort St., those in debt can be assisted in one of the following ways:

—A self-help program in which counsellors assist them in making suitable arrangements to pay back their creditors.

—Pool accounts in which the debtor gives a large portion of his income each month to the debtor assistance division and the division makes the payments directly to the creditors. Sometimes the creditors have agreed to reduce the interest rate in exchange for assurance that repayment is almost certain.

—Cash settlement. If the debtor cannot reasonably hope to repay the full amount, the division may negotiate a cash settlement with the creditor, paying the amount immediately and then having the debtor pay back the division. One furniture company was so happy to unload one debtor that it accepted $200 cash as payment in full for a $1600 debt.

—Orderly Payment of Debts. This is a court order obtained by the debtor assistance division reducing the interest rate to 5 per cent and extending the time required to repay the loans. Regardless of how high the interest rate is, it reduces to 5 per cent under this program — and this usually makes all the difference to the debtor. At that point he can begin getting out of debt.

—In cases where nothing else will solve the problem, the debtor can declare himself bankrupt. This is done by having a debtors assistance division counsellor refer the debtor to the bankruptcy division of the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs.

In its first full year of operation, the provincial branch has helped consumers pay back $791,410 to creditors. Of this amount $556,136 was through the Orderly Payment of Debts program at 5 per cent interest. The other $235,274 was through pool accounts or cash settlements.

The average age of 3,500 who came in for assistance is in the early thirties and their average debt load was $8,000 plus mortgage debts.

The debtors assistance counsellors know that the debt problem can be cured but they are even more interested in getting the word out that debt problems can be prevented.

Furniture grouping separates living room, entry

Practical, and Interesting

By PAULINE GRAVES

The creative person seldom is in a rut. Present a design problem or a situation to him, and the creative juices start to flow as every aspect of the project is considered. Unfortunately, most of us do not have that talent, and we must rely on the ideas of others. But we can borrow or adapt fresh, new ideas to our own needs.

For instance, the entry shown here is most unusual, and it works well. And who among us, except for a trained professional, would have thought to elevate the floor at the point of entry, two steps up from the living room. This marks off the 6'x9' space as a separate area, augmented by the 15-inch high railing between living room and entry. As it functions as a landing between stairs travelling in opposite directions, it is also a small stage for arriving guests.

Aside from aesthetic considerations, the elevated entry is practical, too, solving a problem for the stairway to the second floor.

Sinusitis Sufferers Swear It's an Epidemic Problem

By DR. W. J. WELCH

medical report

If the testimony of sufferers from "sinusitis" is to be believed, there is hardly a city in the country that is not entitled to be called "sinusitis hollow."

North and south, east and west, the packed waiting rooms and treatment cubicles of ear, nose and throat specialists seem to confirm that sinusitis is a national ailment, which is almost always epidemic.

A significant segment of the population is recurrently plagued with stunning headaches, a running or a blocked-up nose the persistent post-nasal drip.

This tirad of symptoms with assorted complications may be acute or chronic, severe or just annoying and, more importantly, may or may not in fact be due to infection in those hollow and normally air-containing bony spaces called the "paranasal sinuses."

Situated behind the upper cheeks, the antral or maxillary sinuses, back of the bridge of the nose, the sphenoids and ethmoids and above the eyes in the lower forehead, the frontals, the paranasal sinuses are lined with the same velvety, mucus-producing tissue that lines the nose. Each of them possesses an opening into the nasal passageway that wollows accumulated secretions to drain.

When normal drainage through these openings is interfered with by infection, allergic swelling or anatomical distortion within the nasal passageway, symptoms of sinusitis appear.

Often a combination of all three is responsible for the trouble and made worse by seasonal extremes of temperature and humidity, air pollution, cigarette smoking and emotional upsets.

The first necessity in the management of acute or chronic sinusitis is to sort out which factors are causing the difficulty. Careful examination may reveal thickening of structures within the nose that is so marked as to obstruct drainage. Or it may be that the bony septum dividing the nasal passageway deviates to the right or left, thus closing off one side of the nose.

Allergy may be a factor and require detective work to find the offending irritant.

When bacterial infections within the sinus cavities is suspected as the cause of the trouble, it is often difficult to select an appropriate antibiotic. Bacterial cultures of the nose may be misleading because organisms in the nasal passage often differ from that within the sinus cavity, where the source of the trouble is.

A recent study has disclosed that when antral or maxillary sinuses are acutely or chronically infected, organisms recovered by swabbing the nose were rarely the same as those found by draining the contents of the infected sinus.

It is the latter that need to be identified so that an effective antibiotic can be chosen to treat the infection.

In the same study, it was reported that although X-rays of the sinuses are helpful in identifying sinusitis, transillumination of the antral sinuses was often more helpful.

Transillumination is accomplished in a darkened room. A special light source is pressed against the upper cheek below the eye and the patient is instructed to open his mouth wide.

When there is no infection in the antrum, light can readily be seen shining through the hard palate at the roof of the mouth. When there is no light transmission through the antrum, it is almost 100 per cent sure that it is infected.

Single People Promoted

WASHINGTON (AP) — An editorial in the May issue of Christianity Today says churches and other Christian institutions have assumed for too long that everyone should be married.

"Maybe we have celebrated Mother's Day and Father's Day long enough," the editorial says. "Perhaps it is time to replace these celebrations with Marriage and Family Day and Singles Day.

"This might help to establish the needed principle that marriage is not for everyone."

Two Canada Manpower Information Sheets are of special interest to many readers.

The "Local Employment Assistance Program" ("Programme d'aide a la creation locale d'emploi") provides funds to create employment opportunities for people who might otherwise remain unemployed. Some will learn new skills, while others will learn how to cope with changing situations and how to update their skills.

L.E.A.P. (Pacle) projects may be suggested by non-profit organizations, community groups, voluntary agencies or individuals.

The basic criteria for grants under the L.E.A.P. program are described in the folder.

The "Canada Manower Industrial Training Program" ("Programme de formation industrielle de la main d'oeuvre du Canada") provides incentives to Canadian business and industry for the improvement of employee training programs.

As a rule, employers are responsible for training their own workers. However, if it is in the public interest, the Department of Manpower and Immigration may assist employers in developing their training program.

The leaflet discusses who is eligible for assistance, what type of training can be approved and what costs may be covered.

Both publications are available from all Canada Manpower Centres across Canada.

What do you know about calcium?

Calcium is an important factor in the normal development and maintenance of bones and teeth, especially in infancy and childhood. And it is important too, for adults, for the maintenance and repairing of bones. Calcium also helps control muscle action and aids in clotting blood.

Fresh milk is an excellent source of calcium for your family.

One 8-ounce glass of whole milk (cost—less than 14¢) contains 288 mg. of calcium.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch
Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.
A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.
One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.
And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.
In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.
Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Upbeat Spirit Marks Spring Fashions

By BERNARDINE MORRIS
N.Y. Times

NEW YORK — Perhaps it's the Bicentennial. Or maybe it's just the quality of the clothes. Whatever the reason, it's been a very long time since Seventh Avenue fashion openings had such a pervasive upbeat spirit.

It's as if everyone got together and decided to boost their own, and designers contributed their bit by making clothes that carried an undercurrent of excitement without churning up any artificial controversy via skirt lengths or unnecessary exposure.

Mary Beame, Nancy Kissinger and Robin Duke sat in the first row at the Blassport showing looking pleased, and Paulette Goddard announced after Albert Capraro's show that "it would knock them out in Paris."

Miss Goddard, who spends part of each year in her home in Porto Ronco, Switzerland, said she did not do much clothes-buying in Eur;pe because she found American styles so much better, which is of course what American designers love to hear.

What they are offering for next fall is a variety of clothes that should encompass almost everybody's taste, ranging from strictly tailored to vaguely ethnic. In the last category are practical designs derived from work clothes (lumber jackets) and athletic gear (warmup suits and baseball jackets) as well as a certain amount of fantasy, such as the dresses the covered-wagon crowd wore when they were heading west.

Everybody's cover-up is a big poncho, often hooded, of a blanket.

Bill Blass tailors his poncho in gray flanneland wraps a grey flannel jumpsuit up in it in his Blassport collection.

Cape, tabard gives cathedral look

Striped velvet contrasts with grey flannel layering

He also tosses poncho variants over cuffed calf-length pants — call them culottes — and matching vests. This is the new-length trouser Blass is enthusiastic about and it's part of his tailored look.

For fun and games, he tosses a clear plastic coat or poncho over some man-tailored styles, or puts a kangaroo-like plastic pocket on a jumper. He ties little velvet aprons over jumpsuits to give them more formality and cuts his skirts like kilts. Touches like these take the grimness out of fashion.

Albert Capraro explains his use of layering as providing "options in dressing." He means his big ponchos don't have to be wrapped over the dirndl skirts they're shown with — they also work with jumpsuits and knickers.

Capraro's ethnic gambit has peasant overtones. Those striped velvet dirndls have little matching boleros and pretty silk shirts with them. His mohair knitted wraps and his pleated dresses are impressive for evening.

The Gil Aimbez collection for Genre is practically all fantasy, running from pioneer-woman ankle-length dresses over ruffled pantaloons to blanket coats that look warm enough to keep Eskimos cozy. His pointy-hooded monk's robes over-tunic-length tabards have a cathedral quality — somebody called them "cathedral chic."

Unquestionably, Aimbez is one of the more inventive designers at work anywhere. For women who get bored with conventional clothes, he offers a vast new world to explore.

Dear Lynn and Joel:

About two months ago I received a Ming Aralia from a local florist. Almost daily a few leaves get little bumps on their backs, turn yellow and fall off. One whole branch has now fallen off. I took it back to the florist and he found no evidence of pests or fungus. However, he did spray it with an insecticide and transfer it from a plastic to a clay pot. I have kept the plant in a south window and water when it feels dry to the touch, about two times a week. The leaves are still falling off. Do you know what the problem can be?—R.D.

DEAR R.D.:

We hear the same problem about the Ming Aralia (Polyscias) about 50 times a week! The trick with these plants — at least it's the trick we've found which works — is to maintain a very high humidity while keeping the plant in a lot of, but not direct, sunlight.

We've gone to the extreme of planting ours in a mixture of mostly sphagnum moss, peat moss, purified charcoal and potting soil.

Clue Found to Crib Deaths

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Pennsylvania pathologist has discovered what may be an important clue in the effort to unravel the mystery of crib death, the puzzling syndrome that is one of the leading causes of deaths in infancy.

Dr. Richard Naeye, a professor of pathology at Pennsylvania State University, examined 56 victims of this sudden infant death syndrome and found that 86 per cent had abnormal carotid bodies. These are small organs that help regulate the amount of oxygen in the blood.

"This is by far the most striking abnormality ever described in crib death victims," Naeye said in a telephone interview. "It's something that could not arrive at time of death. It's something that probably has been going on since birth. It's probably a chronic abnormality."

Sudden infant death syndrome claims about 7,500 to 10,000 infants each year. In the majority of the cases, the baby is apparently in good health when put to bed for a nap or for the night, and several hours later is found dead.

Why these babies die is unknown. Naeye said he was sure researchers will find that it has multiple causes.

He said since the carotid body abnormality was seen in most of the victims he examined with the help of the Maryland chief medical examiner's office in Baltimore, "this could well be the major clue to a sizeable proportion of the total cases."

The carotid body is located in the aorta, the artery that carries oxygenenriched blood to all parts of the body. The carotid body samples blood passing by and regulates breathing to keep the level of oxygen and carbon dioxide normal in the blood stream.

Naeye found that in 63 per cent of the victims he studied at autopsy there were a substantially reduced number of cells in the carotid body. Twenty-three per cent had an abnormally high amount of cells.

He said it is reasonable to assume that if a carotid body is structurally abnormal, its functions might also be abnormal. A defect in the carotid body could contribute to the abnormalities of breathing control found in crib death victims.

The carotid body actually fine tunes the breathing and is not required in adults. But the control of breathing in infants is not yet well developed, especially when they are asleep. Naeye suggested the carotid body therefore might be important for babies.

"The problem is we don't really know for sure what their total role is in this particular period of life," he said. "So no one can speak with certainty about what role this particular defect in the carotid body might have."

He said his finding now gives scientists an important lead for further investigation.

"This should stimulate clinical investigators, hopefully, to develop simple tests for looking for high risk symptoms."

Dear Mike:

Three years ago I bought a used 1960 MGC-GT. Parts are becoming increasingly hard to get, especially here in Nebraska. Can you help? — TREED.

Dear Treed:

First, of course, try the East Coast MG distributor, EML, Inc., 600 Willow Tree Rd., Leonia, N.J. 07605. If that doesn't work, go to the factory; British Leyland Motor Corp. Ltd., Longbridge, Birmingham, England. Or for used parts, there is always a number of yards listed in the back of Road and Track.

Dear Mike:

My 1963 Olds gives me lots of trouble when the engine is cold. I press the gas pedal once, then hit the key, and she starts immediately, but then after about 10 seconds the engine falters. I have to keep patting the gas to keep it from dying. Once warm, the car runs fine, but when I park for any length of time, I have to pump the gas and grind and grind. This is my third carburetor in a couple of months. Maybe someone's doing something wrong. — GRINDING.

Dear Grinding.

Check your choke setting. Sounds as if it might not even be hooked up. Or it could be hanging up — sticking.

Dear Mike:

About two weeks ago, the smell of burning oil or gas fumes began entering my 1971 Cutlass. I had the PCV valve replaced, the engine steam-cleaned, the exhaust system checked, oil and filter changed, and it still smells. It seems worse with the engine warm. The car has air conditioning, automatic and 38,000 miles. — STYMIED

Dear Stymied:

Sometimes exhaust fumes get trapped in the backwash behind a car and enter through rust holes in the trunk floor. Often you'll be unaware of holes if they're in the bottom of the spare-tire well or way up in back of the rear seat. Check your luggage compartment to see if it's tightly sealed..

Dear Mike:

I have a 1958 Edsel with the buttons for the automatic transmission in the centre of the steering wheel. These buttons signal an electric motor mounted on the transmission case. This motor is burnt out. I've found two Edsels in junkyards, but both have manual transes. Please help. — EDSELLED

Dear Edselled:

You can have the armature of your motor rewound and the motor rebuilt at any auto electric shop. You might also consider joining the Edsel Owners Club, West Liberty, Ill. 62475.

"WHEW! THAT TEACHER'S TRYIN' TO WEAR OUT OUR BRAINS BEFORE WE EVEN GET TO FIRST GRADE!"

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Without any doubt, of the three departments of bridge — bidding, declarer's play, and defenders' play — defensive play is the most difficult. This fact applies to all echelons: novices, average players, and experts.

Thus it has always been a source of pleasure to me when I come across a hand in which the defence was outstanding. Such was the case in today's deal, which came up a few years ago in the Masters Team-of-Four Championships. Sitting East was Eddie Kantar, of Los Angeles.

◇ J 10 8 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	1 ♡	Pass	4 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♣.

A low club was played from dummy on the opening lead. East put up the nine, and South won the trick with his ace. A spade was then led to the board's ace, after which the spade king was cashed, South discarding the club deuce. The trump 10 was played next, and taken by Kantar's ace. Kantar now paused for reflection.

It was rather obvious that South had nothing but red cards remaining in his hand: had South possessed another club he surely would have led the board's queen of spades and discarded that club. It was equally obvious that if the four-heart contract were to be defeated, the defenders had to make three diamond tricks.

The only set-up whereby three diamond tricks could be made was if West had the diamond king. And if such were the case, then the defenders had a chace. So, after winning his trump ace at trick four, Kantar led his deuce of diamonds. When West won this trick with the king, he made haste to return his remaining diamond. East took this with the ace and led a third diamond, which West ruffed, for the setting trick.

Of course Kantar was lucky in finding his partner with the doubleton K-x of diamonds. But with the queen in evidence in dummy, there was no other hope.

When the deal was replayed, South also reached a four-heart contract. This contract was fulfilled when, after taking his trump ace, the East defender mechanically laid down the club queen. South ruffed, picked up West's trumps, and conceded two diamond tricks. His only losers were two diamonds and the trump ace.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Involvement, participation, the giving of yourself . . . all of this is very much a part of current scenario. Take nothing for granted. Realize there is a price tag. You get nothing for nothing, despite protestations from charming member of opposite sex.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Home life, property values could command attention. One in position of authority could demand quick changes. You succeed now through unorthodox procedures. Another Taurus, a Scorpio and a Libra figure in scenario.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be drawn between the practical and the idealistic. Key is to know where and when to draw line. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. Someone is trying to pull wool over your eyes. Strive for fairness — and clarity of vision.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with creative endeavors, responsibility. Capricorn figstanding of young persons. You are rewarded for business acumen, for accepting responsibility. Captricorn figures prominently. Legal document requires your signature.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): What had been "pending" is concluded. Aries, Libra individuals could be in picture. What seemed to be opposition could boomerang in your favor. Family member acts in eccentric manner. Be understanding without being gullible, foolish.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New approach serves your best purposes. Be independent, creative, especially when dealing with close neighbors and relatives. Leo, Aquarius could be in picture. Call or message could precede short trip.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Follow through on hunch. Expand areas of interest, including electronics, nutrition, astrology. Aquarian figures prominently. Hold tight to cash — impulsive moves now are costly. Know it and consolidate recent gains.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Clarify point of view. Be sure others understand your objectives, motives. Accent communication. Socialize — make new contacts. Element of timing of luck is on your side. Steer clear of family quarrel. It would be counter-productive and unnecessary.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Check resources; get an accounting. Take nothing for granted. Study fine print; read between the lines. Emphasis on what is hidden or apparently lost. If thorough, you turn what seems a setback into a stunning victory. Taurus, Scorpio and Leo could be in scenario.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent on desire, return on business investment, a new understanding which puts friendship on a "different" level. Count your change. Refuse to give up something of value for whispered "sweet nothings." If analytical, you succeed. Act accordingly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make domestic adjustments. Fix things at home. Be diplomatic; strive to reach understanding with family member. Emphasis on achievement, promotion, getting along with professional superiors. Business venture succeed through unorthodox avenues.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid direct confrontations. Indirect approach brings constructive results. Be discreet; don't reveal all you know. Check calls, other communications. Virgo and another Piscean could be in picture. Your presence is requested at closed-door meeting.

IF MAY 12TH IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you love to laugh — and eat. Travel is also near the top of your list. You're versatile, popular with the opposite sex, have knack for writing and law. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. In June, you make new starts and contacts and could fall madly in love.

The Singer and the Lonely Rich Man

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. — A female singer aboard a cruise ship took advantage of the loneliness of an eccentric heir to an oil fortune and lured him into a $500,000 marriage agreement, according to the millionaire's attorney.

But the former singer's attorney says the millionaire grew tired of the woman and simply wanted his money back.

A jury deliberated for six hours Monday without deciding the validity of the contract which John McFarlin, 62, signed to marry Joan Manning.

The jury resumes deliberations today.

Mrs. McFarlin says she gave up her singing career, life insurance and pension benefit and a possible claim in another estate to marry McFarlin, the heir to an Oklahoma oil fortune worth more than $9 million.

She wants to keep $350,000, jewelry and a Jaguar automobile given her by McFarlin during their three years of marriage.

Attorney Michael Kaine told the jury the woman "turned her artist-actor glamor on" McFarlin while "he had mental weakness to carry on his affairs" and convinced him to sign the contract in which he agreed to pay her $250,000 before the marriage and $5,000 a year for the next five years.

In his final argument, Kaine portrayed his client as "an old, lonesome man. He's what you might say eccentric in some ways. She knew what she was getting. She knew she was 20 years younger."

Kaine said the marriage never was consummated and the only affection McFarlin received was a wedding day kiss at the altar.

The lawyer said an episode in which McFarlin discovered his wife nude in a guest cottage where another man was asleep on a bed was the only time he ever saw her unclothed.

Mrs. McFarlin's attorney, Jack Kaufman, attacked McFarlin's testimony and said the marriage was consummated and the jury should uphold the pre-nuptial contract.

ROLLING STONE

ERIC CLAPTON'S GOSPELISH Give Me Strength, for which he claims sole authorship, was written 36 years ago, according to the person claiming she wrote it.

Chicagoan Louise King said the song, which appears on Clapton's 461 Ocean Boulevard album, was copyrighted in 1941 and 1949, although she registered neither copyright in Washington.

The song was published in a 1949 songbook, Bowles Favorite Congress Herald No. 25, and the copyright was listed as belonging to King and Roberta Martin, who arranged it.

Clapton's arrangement is identical to Martin's, although he sings only the chorus and changes some words. British writer Peter Guralnick, Clapton about the song (before Turner knew of the disputed authorship).

Clapton's reply: "It was pretty easy to write a song like that, because you're not writing anything brand new. It could have been sung by anybody . . ."

Louise King hadn't heard of Clapton or his version of the song until musicologist Tony Heilbut (who, together with writer Peter Guralnick, found the original lyric sheet) called her. Heilbut said he repeatedly tried to inquire with Clapton's record company, RSO, about a possible settlement for King but had no luck.

In New York, RSO executive vice president Bill Oakes said he didn't know anything about Kinng's and Heilbut's claim, although he said RSO was negotiating with another music company, who claimed they owned the copyright to the tune.

"Eric told me, 'I probably did cop it,' " said Oakes. "It was one of those subliminal things."

He added, "We do take these claims seriously and investigate everyone."

Clapton, who's been recording in The Band's studio in Malibu, could not be reached for comment.

DAVID CROSBY WASN'T SUPPOSED to talk, but that didn't stop him. "We all agreed not to say anything," he told us over the telephone from Miami's Criteria Studios, "but I'll tell ya that it's fascinating and there's some good music here."

Crosby was spilling the beans on his reunion in the studio with Steve Stills, Graham Nash and Neil Young. Whether an album will result from the sessions is not known; Young could be heard in the background discouraging further talk by calling out, "Now quit asking questions."

BOZ SCAGGS WOUND UP UNCONSCIOUS outside an Austin blues club called Antone's early April 16 after having a disagreement with one of the club's bouncers.

Problems started after Scaggs, who'd performed earlier at the Municipal Auditorium, tried to get backstage to meet headliner Bobby Bland.

Owner Clifford Antone picked up the action from there:

"He kept saying, 'I'm boz Scaggs,' but Bobby was getting dressed and didn't want anybody up. So he was told he had to go up at our discretion, not his."

According to Antone an intense argument with the bouncer at the door ensued and eventually Scaggs popped the bouncer in the mouth.

"I pulled Boz off and bear-hugged him," continued Leon Eagleson, another employee of the club, "and took him to the street. Another of our bouncers came out and Boz started smartin' off. So Randy just hit him once in the face — knocked his feet off the ground — and he fell straight back."

Pianists from Five to 24 Entertain at Big Finale

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

An outstanding group of young artists entertained a large audience at McPherson Playhouse, Monday evening, in a Victoria Music Festival summing up.

The program covered most aspects of the festival with exception of school ensemble classes.

Pianists from five-year-old Michelle Himick, winner of the concert group under 8 class, to 24-year-old Allen Reiser, winner of the Open Performance award; string players; singers, including the Rose Bowl and male oratorio winners (Susan Word and Richard Margison); outstanding performers from speech arts, accordion classes, wind instruments and dance, demonstrated the high standard that has been characteristic of the festival this year.

Piano championships which had been decided at the weekend resulted in the major trophy, the City of Victoria Medallion and $150 bursary going to Miranda Wong. Junior champion is Diane Underwood, intermediate, Bob Tweten and senior, Malcolm Woodland.

Runners up in the open medallion class were Robert Hollistan, Arthur La Vertu and Arne Sahlen; in the junior, Timothy Williams, Daphne Kalfon, Cordelia Chan and Ingrid Brandstetter; intermediate, Monica Pfau, Geoffrey Jay and Patricia Izik; senior, Anna Lowe and Gloria Wong.

Miranda Wong and Allen Reiser, winner of the open performance award, were named by the adjudicators as Victoria Festival representatives at the Provincial Final Festival in June.

Other awards in the piano section went to Judy Au, Melinda Cownden, Arthur La Vertu, Linda Gould, Walter Prossnitz, Sarah Wood, Diane Underwood, Anna Lowe, Robert Holliston, Sandra Hunt and duettists Diane Silverwood and Tracy Johnson.

LAS VEGAS — Howard Hughes did not leave his hotel suite for four years, including the day he was supposedly picked up in the desert by a man named in the purported Hughes will, according to daily records kept by the billionaire's guards. The logs show nothing to indicate Hughes was out of the suite at any time in January, 1968, when Melvin Dummar said he found a man claiming to be Hughes beside a desert road. In another will development actress Terry Moore asked the probate court to advise her of any developments in the processing of the will, claiming to be a former wife of the billionaire. Records show she was married and divorced to two other men during the eight-year period she said she was wed to Hughes.

NEW YORK — Daniel Felder, 20, was held up by a language barrier while holding up a bank in the city's Spanish section and the delay may have contributed to his arrest. Felder passed a note to a teller at Capital National Bank that said: "This is a stickup. Fill up the bag. I have a gun." Unfortunately for Felder, the teller spoke only Spanish and couldn't read the note. Soon several other tellers were involved in attempting to translate the note while Felder stood patiently waiting. They finally figured out what it meant and the teller stuffed $500 into the bag. Felder then dashed from the bank and climbed over a 15-foot wall into the hands of an off-duty policeman who had just shown up for a game of handball.

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — The former wife of comedian Red Skelton has been found dead from an apparently self-inflicted gunshot wound, sheriff's deputies say. The sheriff's office in Riverside County said Georgia Skelton, 54, apparently shot herself in the head Monday with a .38-calibre revolver. No suicide note was found, but authorities said Mrs. Skelton had been despondent for some time.

There is some one who misses you sadly,

And finds the time long since you went,

There is some one who thinks of you always,

And tries to be brave
and content.

Gone is the face we loved
so dear,

Silent the voice we loved
'Tis sad, but true,
we wonder why,

The best are always
the first to die.

There is a link death cannot sever,

Love and remembrance
last forever.

Gone is the face we loved
so dear,

Silent the voice we loved
to hear;

'Tis sad, but true,
we wonder why,

The best are always

OPINION SOUGHT ON DRINKING AGE

An opinion poll asking the public whether the legal drinking age should be rolled back to 21 is being organized by the Greater Victoria Association on Alcoholism.

The association claims that damage done to and by drinking teenagers was greatly underestimated when the age limit was lowered to 19 in 1970.

The lower drinking age has created alcoholism in teenagers and sharply increased delinquency and crime due to alcohol, says association president H. T. Allen.

He points out that Saskatchewan has banned drinking for 18-year-olds and Ontario is studying a similar proposal by a committee of the legislature. "However, since B.C. was among the first to start this, it would be wise to be among the first to recognize the mistake."

The association is conducting two opinion polls. The first, arranged in conjunction with Greater Victoria churches, has early returns strongly in favor of raising the drinking age, Allen said.

Ballots are also being published in local newspaper advertisements, but voters are being asked to enter only one poll. Results will be used to back up a presentation to the B.C. government.

OPEN SPACE GALLERY EXHIBITS REALIST

An exhibition of paintings by photo-realist Mary Pratt opened Monday at Open Space Gallery, 606 Fort, and will run until May 29.

The internationally-known artist is interested in celebrating what she thinks is good about society. When she sees something she likes she takes a photograph and works from the slide image.

She chooses to use oils rather than acrylics to make her pictures appear old. She used the same kind of small sable brushes used in Victorian times and describes her love of textures as "baroque". Her aim is to do as well by textures like tin foil and Saranwrap as 17th and 18th century painters did by cotton and linen.

Born in Fredericton, N.B. and a fine arts graduate of Mount Allison University, Pratt's work has been shown in numerous group exhibition and is included in public collections such as the National Gallery, Canada Council art bank, University of Toronto and Canadian Art Archives of the Vancouver Gallery.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Roy Jessiman, of Thompson, Berwick, Pratt and Partners, is to be awarded the fellowship of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada at a convention in Ottawa on May 18. He is a senior partner at the firm and specializes in school design.

Shooting Victims Stable

The condition of two men wounded in a shooting at a Dockyard club Sunday remains unchanged today.

Richard Cory Wallis Small, 32, of 519 Constance, is still in poor condition and John Warren Ingham, 29, of 825 Admirals is in fair condition, both in the intensive care unit of Victoria General Hospital.

Joseph Hadasz, 43, of 819 Wollaston, appeared in Victoria provincial court Monday charged with two counts of attempted murder and was remanded to Friday for plea and bail application.

According to Esquimalt police the shooting occurred at about 11:06 p.m. in the Dockyard Recreation Association club, 763 Admirals, after an argument broke out between two men.

A police spokesman said an off-duty military policeman, James Edward of CFB Esquimalt, tried to intercede when one of the men pulled a small handgun.

The spokesman said Edward managed to get between the two men and was trying to "cool them down" when the gunman fired twice, hitting Small in the neck and Ingham, a friend of Small's who was coming to his aid, in the chest.

Edward then grabbed the gunman, wrested the gun out of his hand, and prevented him from leaving until police arrived.

A .25 calibre six-shot, semi-automatic Browning revolver was seized, the spokesman said.

Ford Slashes Campaign Budget

WASHINGTON (WP) — A 25 per cent cut in the staff of the President Ford Committee has been ordered by campaign chairman Rogers C. B. Morton in an effort to save money for the last-ditch struggle with Ronald Reagan.

Notices were sent Friday of a "painful" retrenchment that will cut the headquarters staff from 207 at the beginning of the month to 152 by the end of this week and 145 by June 1.

Morton said the firings were necessary because the Ford campaign is "at the upper end of the legal spending limits" and must conserve funds for the primaries yet to come and its operations at the Republican convention in August in Kansas City.

A committee spokeswoman said that, as of last Thursday, the Ford committee had spent almost $9 million of the maximum $13 million permitted under the campaign law.

With 16 primaries still to come, including a vital race on June 8 in California, where television advertising time is extremely expensive, the Ford campaign faces an urgent need to ration its spending.

The Reagan campaign, by contrast, was spent only $3.25 million as of last week, according to its controller, Darold Trent, and still had $3.75 million to spend.

According to Ford campaign spokesmen, the firings ordered Friday will reduce the finance staff from 80 to 40, the advertising staff from 22 to 14, the administrative staff from 35 to 24, and the political division from 41 to 29.

The savings are estimated to be $60,000 per month.

According to its report filed Monday with the Federal Elections Commission, the Ford committee had $413,237 in cash on April 30 and unpaid bills and loans of $342,547 — leaving a net balance of just over $70,000. But a committee spokeswoman noted that the Ford campaign has $1.5 million in federal matching funds due, if and when the president signs the bill reconstituting the Federal Elections Commission.

Ford has indicated reservations about the legislation and has not made it clear whether he will approve or veto it.

Some of the president's supporters have been critical of the campaign leadership for spending heavily in the winter and spring primaries, when Ford was aiming for a knockout blow at Reagan.

WINNING CARTER FACES NEW FOE

By The Associated Press

Jimmy Carter, far ahead in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination, took on a new foe, Senator Frank Church, in Nebraska's primary election today while President Ford tried to throttle Ronald Reagan's challenge in Republican voting there and in West Virginia.

Democrats were voting, too, in West Virginia, where the field was limited to two candidates, and in Connecticut, where the election was just the first step in picking the state's national convention delegation.

Ford, loser of four primaries in a row, squared off with Reagan in statewide popularity contests with no effect on the delegate count. But 25 Republican delegates were at stake in Nebraska in separate contests in congressional districts and West Virginians chose 28 delegates uncommitted by state law.

Reagan went into today's primaries yith 396 delegates to Ford's 309, with 1,130 needed for the nomination and 1,207 yet to be chosen.

The major Democratic contest was in Nebraska, where Senator Frank Church of Idaho made his primary debut. There were 11 candidates on the Democratic ballot and 23 delegates at stake, but only Church and Carter campaigned there.

'Rotten' Army Meat Bought with Bribes

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. army meat inspectors stole, took bribes and were furnished with the services of prostitutes to assure that they would not "hassle" packers who were selling the U.S. defence department inferior meat at sirloin prices, testimony before a Senate committee says.

Senator Lawton Chiles, chairman of the Senate government operations subcommittee on federal spending practices, said at Monday's hearing that lack of discipline, fraternization between officers and enlisted personnel and lack of training for military inspectors resulted in a "rotten" military meat procurement system.

Edward Kehl, former supervisor for the now-defunct G. and G. Packing Co. of Boston, testified Monday that the firm regularly filled army orders for choice beef with lower-priced meat and substituted tough cuts for tender.

Kehl agreed with a calculation by Chiles that the substitution of knuckle for sirloin tip butts by G. and G. might have resulted in illegal profits of up to $192,000 a day.

He said young, inexperienced army meat inspectors never detected the substitution because of the way the meat was cut.

Kehl said the firm also sent knuckle to Blue Ribbon Frozen Foods of Hamden, Conn., to fill that firm's army contracts. Both New England meat-processing firms, now closed, were owned by Harry and Frank Goldberg.

Charles Reidinger, former army supervising inspector in the Boston area, testified that Harry Goldberg started paying him $200 a month in the fall of 1974 and later raised it to $400. He said he was told the company "just wanted no major hassle, no nit-picking."

And Reidinger said Frank Goldberger furnished him with prostitutes about 10 times over a 10-month period.

Manuel Pacheco, former civilian supervisor in the army's Boston inspection office, said Harry Goldberg gave him $100 a week at first and later $200 a week "just for not hassling the employees."

The Senate hearing resumes Wednesday with witnesses from the army's health services command and veterinarian inspection service.

Secret Bugs Planted During FBI Break-Ins

WASHINGTON (WP) — The FBI still conducts break-ins against intelligence targets without getting a court order, a special Senate Intelligence Committee report said Monday.

The Senate investigators said such surreptitious entries are conducted mainly to plant hidden microphones and other recording devices, but occasionally the missions have turned into raids for other information as well.

The FBI assured the committee that in recent years, at least, the "opportunity" to expand the entries into multi-purpose burglaries has been "exploited" only against foreign agents.

The report said that according to an FBI memorandum supplied to the committee last fall, in the course of installing electronic bugs, "there have been occasions when observations and recordings were made of pertinent information contained within the premises."

The release of the 16-page report coincided with a statement by FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley that it is "my great desire to dispel any thought that the FBI can't be trusted."

Kelley made his remarks while taping a television interview in Nashville, Tenn., as a followup to a weekend speech in which he said the FBI was sorry for past abuses.

The Senate committee report said that special team of FBI agents have carried out more than 1,000 surreptitious entries without judicial warrants since the Second World War, "despite the questionable legality of the technique and its deep intrusion into the privacy of targeted individuals."

FBI Saw Taxpayer Returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has abused its unique investigative powers by granting the CIA and FBI illegal access to taxpayer returns, a U.S. Senate intelligence committee report says.

The report says "the FBI has had free access to tax information for improper purposes," while the CIA regularly bypassed official channels in obtaining IRS data.

The report, released today, said that both the CIA and FBI pressed the IRS to take action against "certain taxpayers for reasons having no bearing upon compliance with the tax laws," the report said.

The 85-page report also gave details of the workings of such previously disclosed IRS programs as:

—The special services staffs' investigation of 11,000 politically active of dissident individuals and organizations;

—The information gathering and retrieval system — "a glut of largely useless information" on nearly half a million U.S. citizens.

Marriages Decline, But U.S. Discovers Early Divorces Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time in 16 years, the number of marriages in the United States declined in 1974 and even fewer marriages appeared to have been performed in 1975, the government says.

There were 2,229,667 marriages in 1974, a decrease of more than 54,000 from the previous year, final marriage figures compiled by the National Centre for Health Statistics showed Monday.

Provisional date for 1975 indicate the decline continued, with an estimated 2,126,000 marriages. In 1958 there were 1,451,000 marriages.

The median age of brides and bridegrooms at first marriage had remained constant in recent years at 20.6 years for females and 22.5 years for males, the report said.

But the increasing trend toward more divorces at an earlier age had lowered the median age at remarriage to 32.1 years for women and 35.7 years for men. Those ages are 3.5 and four years lower, respectively, than in 1963.

Although marriage rates have declined in recent years, the report said, they still are higher than the period between the mid-1950s and the mid-1960s.

The provisional 1975 marriage rate was 10 marriages in every 1,000 population, a 4.8-per-cent decline from the 1974 rate of 10.5 in every 1,000.

Vandalism Threatens Computers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is little protection for the government's 9,000 computers, and the big brains are "dangerously vulnerable" to terrorism, vandalism, and natural disasters, according to a General Accounting Office study.

The GAO study of security precautions at 28 federal data processing facilities around the country which store such data as Social Security and Internal Revenue Service records reported a lack of security precautions.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, who requested the study, said in a statement which accompanied the report Monday that "it is impossible to estimate the effects on millions of our elderly citizens whose livelihood depends on Social Security should the computers be destroyed."

He said the investigators found that "not only are these thousands of computers frequently allowed to function without proper controls — but . . . they are dangerously vulnerable to terrorist activity."

"The potential threat is not limited to Social Security. In terms of federal revenues, for instance, imagine the havoc that would result from the destruction of federal tax returns," he said.

The study also said 14 installations lacked contingency plans to insure continued operations in the event of destruction of the computerized systems.

Northern Indian Rights Dominate Berger Inquiry

VANCOUVER (CP) — Concern for the rights and future of the native people of the North dominated the opening Monday of a series of southern hearings into the Mackenzie Valley pipeline.

The inquiry, headed by Mr. Justice Thomas Berger of the B.C. Supreme Court, has held hearings in the North since March, 1975 to examine the social, economic and environmental impact of the proposed pipeline.

Bill Wilson, of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, said Canada would pay if it committed genocide against the northern natives as he said had been inflicted on southern Indians.

In the south, he said, disease, religion and law were used to destroy the Indian culture, leaving only reserves, or "places for Indians to die."

Companies proposing pipelines to take natural gas from the North say jobs will be created for northern natives "How many Indian engineers do you know?" Mr. Wilson asked at the hearing.

He said Canada's treatment of natives compared to Nazi Germany's slaughter of the Jews.

The B.C. Federation of Labor, a Vancouver alderman, the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control (SPEC), Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo and the Inter-Church Committee for World Education Development presented submissions favoring settlement of native land claims before building the pipeline.

However, the Vancouver Board of Trade said in a brief to the hearing: "With proper planning, northern residents can enjoy maximum benefits from a pipeline development with a minimum change to their regular or hereditary fishing, hunting or trapping rights."

Len Guy, secretary-treasurer of the labor federation, said: "Any decision to proceed on present plans now or at the forseeable future would be a disastrous blunder from the point of view of Canada's future and a callous inhuman action against the native people of the north."

ROAD WOES STRESS

CAMPBELL RIVER — Southern Vancouver Island municipalities do not share the view of their north Island counterparts, that road priorities exist only on the northern part of the Island.

Their strong stand was responsible for a change in a brief to be presented soon to the provincial government by the executive of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities.

The meeting endorsed a motion that the association's road committee report, presented at the spring meeting here after two years' study, be altered to state the number one road priority be the entire Island Highway from Victoria to Port Hardy.

The report had indicated that the No. 1 priority on the Island was the upgrading, completion and improvement of the highway. Particularly from Nanaimo north, including the "missing link" — Kelsey Bay to Camp Woss.

Municipal leaders from southern arts of the Island charged the committee with ignoring their areas.

Mentioned specifically was the Cowichan Valley and a road from Victoria to Port Renfrew, which was described as a "classic example of a road desperately in need of upgrading."

The Langford and Colwood areas were also mentioned as "real problem areas" as well as the Malahat.

22,000 MORE OUT OF WORK

B.C. Tops Jobless Jump

Times News Service

British Columbia unemployment took the sharpest jump in Canada last month — a full one per cent — leaving 9.7 per cent of the work force out of work.

Across Canada, the figure was 7.4 per cent, up from 6.9 in March. It is the highest unemployment rate this year and an increase of 0.4 per cent from April a year ago.

The actual number without jobs is the highest since the government began counting the work force in 1940. The rate for April was also the highest for that month since April, 1961.

The national jobless rate is widely expected to grow worse later this year.

The actual number of jobless in British Columbia in April was 110,000 in March, up from 102,000 in April and 88,000 at this time last year.

The number of Canadians actually employed dropped to 1,005,000 from 1,006,000 a year ago while the total labor force increased to 1,116,000 from 1,093,000.

Across Canada, the increase in the jobless rate was centred in workers aged 25 or more. Statistics Canada said 4.4 per cent of men in that age group were out of work last month, up from 3.8 per cent in March. For women, the rate rose to 7.1 per cent from 6.1 per cent.

The gloomier jobless picture was apparent across the country. Only two provinces, Manitoba and New Brunswick, had lower unemployment last month than in March.

Manitoba had one of the best performances, as its jobless rate declined last month to 4.5 per cent from 4.9 per cent in March.

Saskatchewan held steady with four per cent of its work force unemployed in each month.

But in Alberta, unemployment rose for a second month as 4.1 per cent of jobs compared with 3.8 per cent in March.

Ontario's jobless rate worsened as the percentage of its labor force unemployed grew to 6.5 last month from 6.2 in the previous month.

And in Quebec, unemployment increased to 8.3 per cent of the work force from 7.7 per cent in March.

New Brunswick was the exception among the Atlantic provinces, as its jobless rate eased last month to 11.2 per cent from 11.5 per cent in March.

By contrast, unemployment rose to 9.1 per cent from 8.2 per cent in Nova Scotia. In Newfoundland — traditionally the province with highest unemployment — the rate rose to 14 per cent in April from 13.4 per cent in March.

There are still a large number of students coming on the labor markets for temporary work.

They will likely show up in higher jobless rates for under-25 age workers later in the year.

3 MORE SHOCKS

UDINE, Italy (UPI) — Three more tremors shook earthquake-devastated northeast Italy today, and soldiers shot stray dogs and cats to prevent an outbreak of rabies.

The tremors were mild and caused no panic, damage or further casualties. They brought to 52 the registered aftershocks, only one of which — early Sunday — was strong enough to create alarm and further crumble existing wreckage.

The Udine Prefecture counted the known dead at 914 and said the final toll should go above 1,000 with about 400 persons still missing.

NOT JUST THE WINE, IT'S THE WRAPPING

LONDON (UPI) — Sotheby's auction house will sell 10 bottles of wine this month for which, because of the wrapping, the minimum price will be $50,000.

The wine comes wrapped in a 1920 Rolls Royce Silver Ghost.

The car and the wine in its trunk — five bottles of 1920 Chateau Marguax and five of Chateau Petrus of the same vintage — are being sold by a commercial Rolls dealer.

It was wheeled into the dealer's premises Monday with motor power provided by four people pushing.

"Oh, it does run, all right," said a Sotheby's spokesman. "It was just being a bit temperamental."

New Lottery Plan Raked

Times News Services

The western provinces, Ontario and opposition MPs lashed out angrily Monday night at plans for a federal lottery to replace the Olympic lottery this summer.

Spokesmen for the western provinces say the new lottery, to be called Loto Canada and run by a Crown corporation will detract revenue from the present Western Lottery only to funnel the funds into Quebec.

Ontario Recreation Minister Robert Welch says the new lottery, unveiled earlier Monday by Treasury Board president Jean Chretien, is a far cry from one proposed by Ottawa and agreed to by the provinces last year.

At that time, plans were to have the revenue from any national lottery split among the provinces for any use they saw fit. Now, Welch said, "it looks as though Ottawa will use the money to promote sports in Canada

Manitoba Health Minister Larry Desjardins said the new lottery could cost his province as much as $10 million in potential revenues.

As well, he accused Ottawa of making a deal with Quebec to help finance the cost of the Olympic Games.

"I think it's a double-cross," the minister said. "I call it dishonesty from the federal government."

B.C.'s provincial secretary Grace McCarthy also said she isn't happy.

Officials responsible for lotteries from the four western provinces will meet in Calgary on Wednesday to present their stand on the new lottery, she added.

In his announcement, Chretien said the new Lottery, if successful, could raise as much as one-third of the money needed to pay the Olympic deficit.

The deficit is expected to be between $900 million and $1.3 billion.

While the lottery may run after 1979, Quebec will not get any more money from it for the Games' deficit, Chretien said.

The corporation will turn over 82.5 per cent of the profits to Quebec for the Olympic deficit and also to the 1978 Commonwealth Games in Edmonton.

The provinces will receive 12.5 per cent based on ticket sales and the federal government five per cent for national sport, recreation and fitness programs.

MEINHOF RIOT HURTS POLICE

FRANKFURT (UPI) — Police headquarters said today seven policemen were injured, two seriously, in fighting with demonstrators protesting the death in jail of urban guerilla leader Ulrike Meinhof.

About 600 demonstrators, shouting "murder in jail," threw firebombs and rocks at police Monday.

One firebomb caught Juergen Weber in his police patrol car and turned him into a human torch, police said.

Mrs. Meinhof, a 41-year-old left-wing writer, was found hanging early Sunday in the Stammheim prison in Stuttgart. Authorities said she committed suicide.

Habitat TV Plans Disrupted

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Preparations for television coverage of the Habitat conference were disrupted today when CBC television technicians failed to report for assignments.

"About 100 installer-wiremen and technical people did not report for this morning's shift," said Jean Benoit, international president of the National Association of Broadcasting Employees and Technicians.

Gerry Donohue, NABET regional director, said the workers reported to the CBC for work but refused jobs on the Habitat site where the CBC is the host broadcaster.

Byron Loe, co-ordinator of network services for NABET, said that, starting today, the union will not work at Habitat sites until the Anti-Inflation Board reinstates the full amount of the contract offered the union by the CBC.

The board cut the wage increase for NABET members to 13 per cent from 15 per cent in the first year of a two-year contract.

Pared-Down Jubilee Coping On First Day of the Strike

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Picket lines went up at 6 a.m. today around all entrances to Royal Jubilee Hospital, the second of the province's 103 hospitals to be struck by the Hospital Employees Union.

The strike is expected to escalate to at least one other mainland hospital later today and will probably hit Victoria General Hospital later this week.

Jubilee is operating on an emergency-only basis and has pared services to the essential level, but seems to be coping with the situation, a hospital spokesman said today.

Pickets were stopping all cars and trucks going into the hospital this morning, asking where the drivers were going and handing out a leaflet explaining the strike "the Hospital Employees Union never wanted."

Hospital workers who belong to other unions are being asked for identification before being allowed through the picket lines to their jobs.

Emergency deliveries of hospital supplies are allowed, but firms delivering such supplies are supposed to notify the pickets before they arrive.

The union's secretary-manager Jack Gerow, in Victoria for the first day of the strike, said the HEU will use whatever strategy necessary to persuade the employers to accept the contract terms contained in an industrial inquiry commissioner report.

Gerow said Victoria General will be struck "whenever we can manage it," probably later this week, but he said there is a possibility of rotating strikes which would allow Jubilee to reopen while the General is shut down.

Gerow, standing in the union's strike headquarters set up on the Jubilee grounds, says the headquarters buildings is one of the ironies of the strike.

The Labor Relations Board, which set out the rules for the strike, ordered that Jubilee provide the HEU with a building where the union could set up its headquarters.

"They were ordered to give us a building so we could be nice and warm," Gerow says.

He calls it part of the "1984 bargaining that we're into."

Jubilee put its strike contingency plan into action at the weekend and is now maintaining only 769 of the 950 beds.

The hospital's executive director Dr. Archie Pickles said Jubilee can opeate for some time at the reduced services level, without affecting the quality of care given to patients who are in the hospital.

The emergency ward at the hospital is open and ambulances are allowed through the picket line without question.

In Vancouver, HEU members at Vancouver General are walking the picket line for the second week now and there appears to be no break in the impasse between the employers and the union.

Labor Minister Allan Williams is to meet today with representatives of the Health Labor Relations Association, the bargaining agent for the province's hospitals.

Williams said the meeting will be to determine whether there would be any point to asking the union to join discussions in an attempt to end the impasse.

He met with union officials on the weekend, but little came out of the meeting.

The escalation of the strike, especially if both Jubilee and General are shutdown at the same time, could force the government to intervene.

Under the B.C. Labor Code, the labor minister can impose a 21-day cooling off period and even union officials seem suprised that that avenue has not yet been taken.

"Railroad workers are essential and I guess we're not," Gerow said this morning, referring to last week's legislation outlawing strikes on the B.C. Railroad."

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith called today's strike "appalling and shocking."

"I don't know where our society has gone, not only allowing strikes in essential services but in life and death," he said.

MARIJUANA EYEDROPS GOOD FOR GLAUCOMA

RESTON, Va. (AP) — Marijuana eyedrops effectively relieve symptoms of glaucoma and are ready for tests on people suffering from the eye disease, researchers say. But those taking the drops will have to put up with a side effect — getting high.

A researcher of the Medical College of Georgia said Monday that animal tests show liquid marijuana "is as good or better than any anti-glaucoma medication currently available."

Dr. Keith Green, associate professor of ophthalmology, said research emphasis is being placed on substances related to or derived from marijuana "that hopefully won't have the euphoric side effects."

General Strike Talk Condemned

Talk of a general strike to protest government actions will only serve to inflame the labor scene, Labor Minister Allan Williams said Monday.

"And I don't believe the workers would support that kind of action," said Williams, adding he was surprised the B.C. Federation of Labor would come out with "that kind of statement."

Federation president George Johnston said over the weekend there is a broad feeling of frustration among the trade unions generally and a major form of protest — perhaps even a general strike — may be taken.

The labor movement's unhappy mood began with federal wage and price controls and now has been inflamed by the Social Credit government's Bill 22, preventing strikes and lockouts on the B.C. Railway for four years.

"It may be that the catalyst that would bring about a general strike in B.C. would be Bill 22," said Johnston.

Williams said the federation has a major leadership role to play in the province and he did not think "that role is being discharged with that kind of statement."

The minister said he fears the labor movement has not fully understood the meaning of Bill 22 — The Railway Operation Continuation Act — and he hopes to clear up the matter when it is discussed in the house later this week or next.

Williams said he hopes to meet with the eight unions involved on the B.C. Railway to discuss the bill but the unions have informed him they will not discuss the issue until he has met with the federation.

A meeting with the federation will therefore be arranged as soon as possible, he said.

Drug Policy for Schools

The Greater Victoria school board has drawn up a policy to allow principals to dismiss children caught with illegal drugs at school, even though that's what happens anyway.

Under the Public Schools Act, principals are already empowered to dismiss a student when he or she is in open opposition to the authority of the school.

But trustees asked the administration to come up with a policy. They discussed at committee level Monday and they'll likely approve it at a board meeting in two weeks, although trustee Dr. Mark Fisher doesn't think the policy will have any effect.

"If we want to have impact we have to engender fear of retribution for a specific act," said Fisher at the committee meeting Monday.

"Dismissal could almost become a matter of peer advantage . . . of peer admiration."

He questioned whether the board would be better to expell students, but superintendent Jake Longmore said expulsion is only used in extremely rare cases.

Dismissal can be ordered for a varying length of time and therefore some can be more severe than others.

"What's the point of engendering a policy that will have little effect," asked Fisher.

Assistant superintendent Dr. John Wiens said the policy will help principals.

It states "any student found in possession of illegal drugs in school or duing any school function may be immediately dismissed from school . . ."

Wiens said the policy represented "what any sensible parent would do in their own home . . . lower the boom. School is depended on to act as a surrogate parent when children are at school and the policy would help schools," he said.

Said Fisher: "Okay . . . shall we move on (to other business)?"

$100,000 for $35,000

A new government agency spent $100,000 last year to collect $35,000 from people who had defaulted on provincial fines, Lorne Newson, director of the year-old civil enforcement of fines division of the attorney-general's department, said Monday.

He said the division hit hardest at those who are contemptuous of the system.

"When people realize we're prepared to take them to court, they might be more willing to meet their obligations," said Newsom.

The eight-member agency, with ex-RCMP staff sergeants as collection officers, will take the first batch of 70 defaulters to court this month.

Newsom says 95 per cent of all fines are paid, while the remaining five per cent go to his agency for collection.

"We deal with the other five per cent," he said. "Most of them are law abiding citizens with monetary problems and some of them are outright crooks."

The agency was set up a year ago to initiate civil proceedings to collect bad debts through small claims court.

Willows Beach Fans Set for New Row

The Willows Beach Association is back in action to battle increased land-use densities in the popular beach area.

Immediately after a council meeting Monday night at which residents assailed plans for a new apartment in an existing apartment-zoned site at 2612 Thorpe Place at the north end of the beach, the association — first formed three years ago — drew itself together again.

R. D. Kilshaw, 2470 Beach Drive, was elected president, Mrs. Nan Ward, 2610 Beach Drive, secretary, and Mrs. D. R. Horton, 2633 Beach Drive, treasurer.

"We will investigate avenues to bring to council's attention the importance of preserving the beach area for recreational use," he said.

Permitting a new, larger apartment building on the site would be a "regressive mistake."

The present building, called Uplands Lodge, is an old house converted into apartments, he said. Its two-storey height compares with the three-storey 30-foot height permitted in the zoning.

But, he said, permitting 30-foot height at the front, and assuming a flat roof, would result in a much greater height at the back because the property is on a slope towards the beach.

Mrs. Horton told council it was the understanding of residents three years ago, when residences were downzoned from apartments to houses, that no further development would be allowed.

She said the seven existing apartment-zoned sites should stay as they are for the life expectancy of the buildings "and then revert to residences."

Mrs. Ward told council "three years ago we fought this battle, to keep this place, Willows Beach, as a place to enjoy. We understood, probably tacitly, not put in writing, these buildings would remain as they are, no additions."

Mayor Brian Smith said it may have been felt three years ago that everything was zoned single-family residential in the Willows Beach area but this was not the case.

All single-family dwellings on apartment-zoned sites were switched to single-family zoning, he said, but seven existing apartments and condominiums were left with their original zoning.

Council agreed to refer several letters to Committee A.

PAY 'STANDARD'

The $41,700 paid Peter Spratt on termination of his contract as principal of Capilano College was neither unusual nor unreasonable, the legislature was told Monday.

Spratt left the college last month after being awarded one year's salary in lieu of notice.

At that time, Education Minister Pat McGeer ordered an investigation into the severance pay and said he was shocked by the amount paid Spratt.

He tabled the report of the investigating committee on Monday which said Spratts' contract called for the one year's pay in lieu of notice and that the contract drawn up was fairly standard for principals at colleges across the country.

McGeer had no further comment.

Differing Views On Legal Drugs

Greater Victoria school trustees have asked their lawyer to determine whether a teacher, or the board, could be held liable for administering prescription drugs to children at school.

Vice-chairman Susan Brice said she was concerned about who would be held liable if an error was made in the administering the drugs and the child had a violent reaction.

She said she recently heard differing legal views on the matter, although when the board adopted a policy allowing school staff to administer drugs it was sure a teacher could not be held liable.

Trustee Peter Bunn said the policy was passed in 1974 and provided that school staff would only take the key cases of children that absolutely had to have drugs administered during school hours.

"I think it's a fair service being given."

A report from administration indicated only "those cases where a pupil requires oral medication in order to function satisfactorily in school activities" would administration of such medication be the responsibility of the principal.

A total of 94 students receive drugs from school staff, ranging from 25 students at Mount Douglas who receive aspirin to eight students at Victor elementary who receive medication all year.

Duncan Negotiators Begin Quiet Talks

DUNCAN — Mediator Clark Gilmour Monday drew a veil over re-scheduled negotiations aimed at solving a three-week strike of non-teaching school staffs in School District 65.

The two sides are in a three-day breather and will resume talks Friday.

School board secretary-treasurer W. F. Brown said the provincial mediator had made the special request for silence from both school district negotiators and International Woodworkers of America, which represents the 85 janitors, maintenance men and drivers who walked out April 21.

Negotiations were held Monday for the first time since April 14.

Meanwhile, 7,800 students are on part-time classes and all kindergartens are closed pending settlement of the dispute over wages.

MAIR DID PROMISE REVIEW: MAYORS

Aldermen who attended a meeting at which Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair spoke last week, have confirmed that he promised a "second look" at ferry fare increases.

Mair, however, sent a letter to the Colonist newspaper Monday denying a report which quoted him as promising the government would review the rate increases scheduled for June 1.

Mair admitted making an "off-the-cuff remark" to the effect the government would always take a second look "particularly when an injustice was alleged," but said he did not mean to convey the impression the government was reviewing rates.

The reporter completely mis-understood his remarks, he said.

At least five delegates to the meeting of Vancouver Island Municipalities confirm that Mair promised the review. They include Campbell River Mayor Kenneth Forde, Courtenay city treasurer James Cuthbert and three other aldermen.

Barn Burns; 25 Rabbits, Sheep Die

An old barn at 4166 Kensington in Saanich burst into flame Monday afternoon killing 25 rabbits and two sheep trapped inside and destroying a small tractor and motorcycle.

Owner Nereo Dalle-Nese was in his house a couple of hundred feet away when he heard a noise outside and spotted the blaze at 5:30 p.m.

A Saanich fire department official said the fire could be seen from the fire hall on Vernon, a mile away. By the time firemen arrived the building was engulfed.

Cause of the fire hasn't been determined.

Firemen set the loss at $8,000.

Prepare for War, Chinese Warn

By ROSS H. MUNRO

PEKING — A Chinese vice-premier had a message for Canadians Monday night: prepare for a world war because its inevitable.

The message was conveyed to Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney by Chi Teng-kuei, an important figure in the Chinese political hierarchy who met the Prairie premier rather unexpectedly last night on the eve of Blakeney's departure from Peking for Shanghai and Canton.

The advice to Canada came at the end of a rather standard Chinese analysis of the current world situation outlined by Chi to Blakeney.

He put forward the view that the arms race was continuing, that detente between the Soviet Union and the United States was a sham ..." Blakeney said later of his conversation with Chi.

The Chinese vice-premier described the Soviet Union in particular as aggressive, imperialistic and power grabbing. He also noted the continuing existence of economic classes in the world.

"He repeated his view that under those circumstances war was inevitable and that Canadians should prepare for it," Blakeney said.

The Saskatchewan visitor pressed Chi on how Canada should prepare "but he simply replied that we should prepare."

It is no secret, however, that China would like to see Canada increase its defence expenditures and play a larger role in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Games Work Still Cut Despite Injunction

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for the Olympic installations board said "there is still some small slowdown" in work at the Olympic stadium today despite a court injunction Monday against plumbers and electricians accused of work disruptions.

Jacques Desormeaux, board communications officer, said plumbers and electricians were on the job "and they are working, but not very fast."

The board got the injunction Monday, alleging the workers staged work slowdowns and commited acts of sabotage at the east-end Olympic park, site of the stadium and related facilities.

Victor Goldbloom, the Quebec minister responsible for the board, told reporters Monday the disruptions which began last Wednesday were of minor importance individually, but collectively had become a matter of deep concern.

He added that he did not feel the actions threatened the Summer Games themselves — scheduled to open July 17 — but could affect the manner and comfort in which they are held and the functioning of equipment.

In its application to the Superior Court, however, the board said the slowdowns had been "of a nature to jeopardize and even prevent the Olympic Games."

The provisional injunction, granted by Mr. Justice Austin Johnson, names Local 144, United Association of Plumbers and Local 1677, Interprovincial Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, both affiliated with the Quebec Federation of Labor, the province's biggest labor organization.

It remains in effect until May 20, when a hearing will be held to determine whether a permanent injunction is necessary.

Spokesmen for the QFL — whose building trades council has been negotiating for a new province-wide contract with employer groups in the construction industry — denied any concerted action at the Olympic site.

A board legal spokesman said "either imprisonment or heavy fines" could result from any failure to comply with the injunction, which was served on the two unions, their business agents and delegates on the site and all the employees concerned.

Anyone knowingly contravening the orders would become subject to contempt of court civil action.

$3,278,839 Budget Set

Central Saanich council approved a 1976 budget totalling $3,278,839 Monday night, an increase which will raise the municipality's mill rate by about four per cent above last year's figure.

The mill rate for school was 44.430 compared with 42.951 in 1975; general purposes 39.154 compared with 37.143. Municipal finance authority .018, the same as last years.

Regional Hospital increased from .940 to 1.070, and assessment authority 1.55 from 21.170.

Total mill rate increase is 85.927 from 82.222.

It means a home owner paying $600 in taxes will pay $630.

Sex Stats Called Shocking

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

A study into sex crimes in Saanich is giving a chilling insight into the frequency, type and pattern of offences committed in the municipality.

The study is being conducted by University of Victoria professor of clinical psychology, Dr. Pam Duncan.

Dr. Duncan and her research assistant, Maxine Stovel, said in an interview they were shocked by the number of cases, particularly the number involving hitchhikers as victims.

Their study began last summer with a review of every sex offence — from obscene telephone call to rape-murder — reported to Saanich police since 1970. The study, which is analysing the characteristics of each act, the offenders and victims, is expected to be completed by the end of this summer.

Dr. Duncan said the list of offences and offenders fills both sides of 12 foolscap sheets of paper, single-spaced.

So far they have examined 92 case histories, 12 of whom victimized a total of 25 hitchhikers over a two-year period.

Dr. Duncan said the study will determine patterns of criminal sexual behavior.

Saanich was selected as a pilot project but eventually she hopes to extend the study to include all of lower Vancouver Island and the Vancouver region, provided she can get funds through the federal government.

Ultimately the information will be fed into a computer and aid police in catching offenders.

She said the RCMP has expressed interest in the project for posssible implementation on a Canada-wide basis.

Duncan said psychologists have long realized sex offenders tend to stick to set patterns but the problem has been in knowing which patterns are prevalent in any given area.

Although it is too early to form definite conclusions, certain patterns are emerging in Saanich.

For instance the research is showing sex offences seem to peak in December-January and May. Of the 25 hitch-hiker cases, four occurred during May and six during Christmas, with the rest scattered through the year, one or two a month, except April when there were none reported.

The study is revealing child molesters appear to be most attracted to girls in the age range of five to seven who are blond, dressed in bright red, and wear short skirts. Also in many cases the offender is known to the child's family as a neighbor, boarder of even babysitter.

Duncan said the findings indicate girls eight to 11 are not as attractive to the offender, but boys age 10 and up are, and that most frequently advances are made on boys as they move into organized sport.

The study is showing as many offenders are married as single. Duncan noted one strange common thread — that a high number of offenders wear matching clothing. If he's got on green pants, his shirt's green too, she declared. In addition many offenders have reported being molested as children themselves. (Duncan cautioned such confessions are not "highly verifiable.")

Offenders in the older age group — 60 and over — pose a special problem, Duncan said, because many don't believe they've done anything wrong. They might admit to a sexual act but not a sexual offence. It's tantamount to a total non-acceptance of society's morals or mores, she said.

Patterns also appear to be distinct for the offender who picks up hitch-hikers. Duncan said one man in the study always went to the same location, a bus stop, to select his victims. Another man would only pick up girls who wouldn't make good witnesses, specializing in hippie-types wearing back-packs.

Almost all of the victims are between 12 and 21, she said, and of the 25 studied, four were boys.

Duncan said there is as much danger in picking up hitch-hikers as there is in being picked up. She cited two recent cases of Saanich women raped by hitch-hiking males.

The actual incidence of sexual assault on hitch-hikers isn't known but Duncan estimated it could run as high as 125 a year in Saanich alone on the basis that only about one incident in 10 is ever reported to police.

Duncan said those who think they are safe if they hitch-hike with a friend are dead wrong.

"When a girl hitch-hikes alone and is threatened, she has the choice of resisting or complying.

"But with a friend the choice diminishes tremendously because if the offender threatens one person, the other inevitably complies.

"It is interesting that she may be prepared to endanger her own life, but not that of a friend."

Trying to find a bank that's open on Saturday has its frustrations, but one American visitor to Victoria fared pretty well last week.

An employee of the Century Inn on Government Street phoned Town Talk to tell of one of the inn's guests who was unaware that Canadian banks, unlike those in the U.S., are not normally open on Saturday.

The American tourist wandered off down Government Street trying doors on the banks along the way until he found one that was open — the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Trouble was, he was the only person in the bank. Oops!

Police were called to remedy the situation and although the tourist didn't get the money he was looking for, he did get a funny story to carry home to his friends down south.

The bank staff was, to say the least, reluctant to discuss the situation.

McKENZIE
. . . a few suggestions

In case Ald. Ron McKenzie is running out of ideas for raising more revenue to offset the cost of running the city's parks system, Town Talk offers the following possibilities.

How about charging the youngsters a dime a head to enter the Beacon Hill Park animal enclosure, and a nickel each to have fun on the slides and swings?

Would it be feasible to fence off the Dallas Road cliff path and charge the strollers and joggers admission?

Maybe the parks department could get stale bread from one of the local bakers, package bread crumbs and sell them to people who'd like to feed the ducks.

Then again, do we really need all those costly roses, tulips and so on? Beds of plastic flowers would look fairly realistic, and they'd last for ever with no maintenance.

INFORMATION CENTRAL — That's the new name for the green-carpeted inner sanctum of Premier Bill Bennett's office. In recent months a new policy has come down that all ministers must have their press releases approved by his office.

Bennett is obviously trying to centralize control in his office and hopes to prevent his ministers from embarrassing slip-ups.

But there's been no noticeable improvement in the quality of press releases, the only obvious effect being long delays for anxious press members trying to get the news out.

The policy hasn't prevented Bennett's ministers from embarrassing slip-ups in verbal encounters with the press and we are wondering if the premier will soon try to take control of his ministers' mouths as well as their pens.

Sour grapes — from a former Vic High student who told Town Talk he was avoiding the whole 100th anniversary bash.

"They expelled me three times — once for using a walkie talkie in class, another time for forging my dad's signature on my report card and again for trying to run down the principal."

Our disgruntled friend, now a local businessman, said in the latter case he had only meant to splash the principal Vic Thompson "but I skidded." He was driving a car at the time — not a bike.

If readers are wondering what happened to the commemorative plaque on the Marilyn Bell monument near Finlayson Point, it's been removed by the city parks department for repairs.

Someone with a peculiar taste in entertainment apparently had some fun defacing the plaque. Perhaps it's the same genius who's been going around systematically breaking branches off the newly-planted trees on downtown sidewalks.

Is Canada going to get a $350 million break from the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. in its purchase of 18 Orion long-range patrol aircraft?

A Time magazine article on Lockheed's financial problems cites the selling price of the 18 aircraft as $650 million.

Since Defence Minister James Richardson's first announcement of the Orion's purchase he and other Ottawa officials have used a $1 billion price tag.

Have Lockheed's financial woes resulted in a cut-rate to get Canada's business or has Time made a $325 million boo-boo?

Mrs. R. A. Harrison, of Saanichton, is pleased to pass along a ray of sunshine in a troubled world:

Her husband hired a reserve Indian to till the garden, for which he charged $11.50, and when Harrison said that didn't seem enough, the Indian insisted that was his price.

Harrison gave more, to which the Indian said he would add the money to his "hungry children fund."

"Here's a man who we think of as being about as low as you can get on the ladder, and he's thinking of less fortunate people," Mrs. Harrison said. "He realizes they'renot so bad off after all, and that's beautiful in a world where everyone is taking and not giving."

The Indian said he had been putting money aside this way for nearly 30 years and brought up his family to do the same.

Some Taxed Less!

Sidney council approved a property tax increase of about five per cent Monday night — but some ratepayers will end up paying less taxes this year than last.

Mayor Peter Malcolm said the municipal mill rate rises by 2.3 mills and the increase for the school district is about 1.5 mills, bringing the mill rate increase close to 4.

"I think everyone can live with it," he said.

In some cases the tax bill will actually be smaller. Municipal clerk Geoffrey Logan said he calculated one probably typical example, a three-bedroom house on a standard lot with a market value likely close to $60,000, and found this year's tax bill down $11 from last year's.

The reason is found in provincial grants, not municipal tax rates. Last year the school tax removal grant was on a sliding scale while this year it had been combined with the home owner grant and set at a flat $280. For some people, that will mean a net tax decrease this year.

Notice of tax bills will go out for the 2,500 properties on Sidney's tax roll about the end of this month and taxes are due by the end of June.

Operating budget for the town this year is $2.2 million.

Sidney and North Saanich councils both gave first reading Monday night to bylaws establishing a joint recreation commission, replacing the tri-municipal commission formerly operated with Central Saanich.

2-1 IN CHAMBER'S POLL

Business Backs Centre

Victoria Chamber of Commerce members have voted roughly two-to-one in favor of a proposal to increase the city's business tax from five to six per cent, to provide a start-up fund for the construction of a convention centre.

But there was no indication today whether the Chamber itself would press for the policy to be adopted, or whether city council is impressed by the results of the survey.

Mayor Mike Young was non-committal, saying only that the result was "no great surprise" to him.

Of the 940 ballots issued to members, 330 had been returned by today. Of these 210 were in favor of the tax hike proposal, and 120 opposed.

Chamber president Jack Hutchins termed the 35 per cent return 'pretty excellent" but declined comment until after the executive committee has considered the final tabulation at its meeting Wednesday.

"We haven't made any decision yet based on the survey," he said.

Mayor Young said the result seems to indicate that the city's retail community generally supports the idea of a civic convention centre, but he repeated his earlier doubts that the hotel and restaurant trades are also in favor.

(Because the ballot was secret, no breakdown of views according to particular segments of the business community is available.)

The mayor said he knows that at least two local professional groups — the medical and bar associations — oppose the imposition of a business tax increase to finance a convention centre, "and I imagine this would be true of other professional groups as well."

He stressed that the "only major direct beneficiaries" of such a centre would be the city's retail businesses, and said city council would act on its assessment of the "broad spectrum viewpoint."

Meanwhile Eric Charman, immediate past president of the Victoria Real Estate Board, who had urged businessmen to vote against the tax increase proposal, said the ballot results indicate a definite lack of interest in what was claimed to be "a great, burning issue."

Charman reiterated his earlier stand that the ballot lacked adequate controls, and allowed businessmen who don't pay the tax to vote.

Instead of a publicly-financed centre, he favors a proposal that Canadian Pacific greatly expand the present convention facilities at The Empress.

Along with the business tax proposal, Chamber members voted to elect nine new directors from a list of 13 candidates.

'Y' One-Third Home

The first report was delivered Monday night on the Victoria YM-YWCA's expansion campaign and it shows one-third of the target of $1,017,000 has been reached.

Campaign manager Charles Frazier said today the canvass of major business firms and senior executives has produced $218,000, one-third of its goal, while $102,300 has been pledged by smaller firms and their executives, 51 per cent of that quota.

Among the five-person teams canvassing the public, each with an objective of $2,500, one team headed by Eric Bonham has already surpassed its goal.

Two individuals, Peter Atkin and teams chairman Ian Rendle, have already tripled their personal objective of $500 each.

The three-week campaign among the public ends June 1.

Over-all objective of the "second step" drive is for $1,350,000 but of this, $332,000 is being sought from the provincial government.

Legal Aid on Wheels Launched by Students

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Two Victoria law students are launching a mobile legal clinic and set off this week by van for a three-and-half month circuit through small northern towns like Chetwynd, Fort St. John, Fort Nelson and Hope.

The University of Victoria law students, Bill Ehrcke and Jamie Dunn, both going into their second-year law, have obtained a $12,000 grant from the Legal Service Commission and the provincial department of labor's summer student hiring program to take law to the people.

UVic law professor Neil Gold said the idea for a mobile legal clinic originated with a lawyer in the Peace River area who was anxious to provide legal service to northern residents hindered by geographical location and lack of funds.

The two law students will roll out of Victoria Wednesday or Thursday for Dawson Creek and other small centres.

A publicity drive will be launched in the north to give advance information to residents.

Liaison has already been arranged with members of the bar, the police and the human resources department, but the students will still have to do a lot of leg work at stops along the way, said Gold.

Ehrcke and Dunn will live in the 21-foot rented van which is equipped with a radio phone and Gold will fly to locations from Victoria once every two weeks to oversee the project.

The clinic will aim to be in the smaller centres on a regular basis, for example, the day court sits in Fort St. John.

"They hope to help people identify a problem, find out whether it needs long range planning or not, give summary advice and act as a referral agency to lawyers stationed in the North" said Gold.

Lawyers feel there is a real need for the service, said Gold. There are 14 lawyers in Dawson Creek, 14 in Fort St. John and one in Fort Nelson. Smaller centres like Chetwynd, and Mackenzie are without local legal service.

For the most part the van serivce will just fill in were there is lack of service, although the more complicated legal questions will still be left to fully trained lawyers.

"They just want to help a legal solution along. If it means conveying a client from Chetwynd to Dawson Creek for legal advice or a court appearance, they'll do it," says Gold.

"Geographical distance seems to be a barrier to legal service . . . lawyers, traditionally, don't go out on wheels."

AIMING FOR TASTE of the practical side of the law, six law students from UVic and UBC were inducted into the Victoria police force Monday as summertime probationary constables and get a warm welcome from Insp. Lyle Somers. The students are, seated: Pat Torrison, Dennis Carson, and David Cowan, all of Victoria; standing: Dev Dley of Lake Cowichan, Eric Partridge and Soren Hammerberg, both of Victoria. Meeting May 19 On Academy

A public meeting will be held May 19 to debate the future of the Victoria Riding Academy, which is threatened with closure if it cannot pay $7,000 taxes due in June.

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. at Uplands elementary school on Henderson.

Cam Spratt, who is heading a committee formed to try and save the academy, said a letter was mailed to Mayor Brian Smith on Monday, asking council to attend.

"We want to get as many out as possible, whether they're pro or con," Spratt said, "All the children at the academy are taking notices around and we're hoping for a good turnout."

Spratt said a member of his committee took a count at the academy on Saturday and reported 300 people visited the Cedar Hill Cross Road recreation facility, either to ride, admire the horses or look around.
